By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — President Ronald Reagan reiterated his opposition to trade tariffs as a solution to farm woes Tuesday during a fund-raiser for U.S. Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, in the Morrison Center here.

With farmers "under stress," federal policy should not hurt them further by closing foreign markets that Reagan said are the key to recovery in the agriculture economy.

He implied he will put pressure on America's trading partners to open their markets. "The era of the all-providing, never-complaining America is over," Reagan told a cheering, sellout crowd of about 1,800 on the Boise State University campus.

Reagan said he is opposed to any policy that raises trade barriers against American products. "I don't care if we are talking about microchips, potatoes, chemicals, or any other product," the president said. "It has to be free, fair, and open trade for all."

Reagan opened his remarks by saying that visiting Idaho was "a little like coming home to old friends after a trip through the twilight zone."

He said he had not forgotten the 66- and 72-percent margins Idaho voters gave him in 1980 and 1984.

Symms referred to Reagan's victories in his introduction of the president, when he joked: "When I got elected in 1980, I had no idea my coat tails would be that long."

Firing up the flag-waving crowd with a jab at the news media, Symms said Reagan's chief of staff, Donald Regan, called him recently to ask if he would like to introduce the most powerful man in the Western world. Symms said, "I'd like to, Don, but I don't know. Dan Rather?"

Symms complimented Reagan on his decision to have American fighter planes force down an Egyptian airliner carrying terrorists involved in the piracy aboard the Achille Lauro last week. The move made him "triple, triple proud" to be an American, Symms said.

"You'll be the only good thing to come out of Washington in a long time that Gov. Evans won't take credit for," Symms said, taking a crack at his likely opponent in his re-election campaign.

Reagan praised Symms and U.S. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, for their work on the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings bill, which calls for a balanced budget by 1990.

The bill is not the smokescreen critics have labelled it, Reagan said, and he defended the current $2 trillion budget deficit. "If we had gotten all the cuts we asked for in 1981, the deficit would be $50 billion less," Reagan said. He hopes the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings plan will pass the House of Representatives.

"And then I hope we'll be able to get a constitutional amendment to ensure the federal government doesn't spend any more than it takes in," he added.

Reagan shifted gears from economic matters to national defense in say that he would not back down on the strategic defense initiative. "If the United States negotiates with anyone, it must be from a position of strength," he asserted. He called the SDI a "historic turning point," marking the first time technology is being sought that will save lives.

Symms got plenty of strokes from Reagan throughout the speech. The president described Symms as a "linchpin, a driving force behind our efforts to keep our country free, prosperous, and at peace." He said Symms has not forgotten that "what's best for Idaho is what's best for America," while he has been in Washington.

Reagan got a rousing cheer for one of his significant departures from the prepared text of his speech when he said the U.S. Constitution differs from others because instead of beginning, "We the government," it says, "We the people will allow the government to do the following things and nothing more than we will allow."

Closing by saying he saw a new patriotism in America, Reagan said he too was proud of American fighter pilots, who had only an hour's

Idahoans lambast 'insensitive' policy

By MARK WARBIS
The Associated Press

BOISE — While President Reagan was being cheered by a partisan Republican crowd at a fund-raising rally for Idaho Sen. Steve Symms, several hundred people gathered just across the Boise River to blast administration policies called either insensitive or ignorant to the plight of the family farm.

Speakers at the "Bitter Harvest" rally in Julia Davis Park blamed the president for high interest rates, unfavorable foreign exchange rates created by the artificially strong dollar, and the staggering federal deficit that they say has decimated rural America.

State Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, urged those attending the rally, many eating donated bean and potato soup speakers compared mockingly to the lavish fare offered at the Symms fundraiser, to sign and distribute petitions with an open letter urging Reagan to take immediate action to save family farms.

"Mr. President, please understand rural America is facing the agony of death. In the middle of this, you and your administration tell us we are to blame for our troubles," Peavey read from the petition.

"At the least, that is insensitive to people who have labored long and hard to feed this country. At the most, it is inaccurate and begs ignorance of the political and economic facts," he said.

Against a backdrop of placards reading "Stop Unfair Foreclosures" and "Farms Not Arms," Peavey blasted a federal tax structure that he said favors large corporations. He called on the president to impose an "Iowa-style" national moratorium on farm foreclosures, approve "reasonable farm aid," and force corporations to share the tax burden.

"Mr. President, if you delay too long your administration will make Herbert Hoover's Depression look like a 4th of July picnic and your only friends will be the international bankers and the extravagantly wealthy wherever they are to be found," Peavey said.

Meanwhile, Reagan told about 2,000 people at the Morrison Center for the Performing Arts that imposing restrictions on foreign imports would only bring retaliation from customers of American farm products.

"When our farmers are under stress as they are now, we must not hurt them further with a trade policy that cuts them off from the foreign markets that are the key to a recovery for our agricultural economy," he said. "Now is not the time to be closing markets and retreating. Now is the time to let the world know we mean business."

Bands, dancers, cheerleaders and balloons

Circus atmosphere for president's visit

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — With four high school bands, three country bands, two troupes of dancers, a patriotic song singer, and a host of balloons, President Reagan's visit to Boise Tuesday resembled nothing so much as a circus.

Inside, "ringmaster" Butch Otter led the crowd of 1,800 in the auditorium through the "Variety Tribute" of dancers, singers, and musicians that kept the crowd happily waiting for the president to arrive from the airport.

Hand-sized American flags were handed out at the doors, so that when President Reagan was introduced by Sen. Steve Symms, the cheering crowd stood and waved the hundreds of flags.

Two bleachers full of bands on the stage from Capital, Boise, Borah and Meridian high schools cranked up "Hail to the Chief," and the pandemonium was complete.

The end of Reagan's speech was marked by a shower of ticker tape, a hail of hundreds of red-white-and-blue balloons, and the unfurling of a colossal American flag that rose from floor to ceiling at the rear of the stage.

As the combined high school bands played "Stars and Stripes Forever," the audience punctuated the march by popping balloons as Reagan was whisked out a side exit, by a crew of unsmiling bodyguards, to a $1,000-per-ticket reception. From there, the party headed back to Air Force One for another fund-raiser in Wisconsin.

Less than half an hour after the president had left the Morrison Center, the podium was gone; the bleachers folded up, and the flag re-furled. Like a circus tent, the auditorium was only a shell, littered with balloon carcasses and programs.

Like a circus, the extravaganza was a minor miracle of planning, requiring coordination between Symms' local staff planning the entertainment, the president's advance team, and a small army of security agents.

Two hours of hoopla buys a lot when President Reagan is aboard. Symms' finance director, Richard Buxton, said the campaign staff expects to take in about $150,000 from the event. Of that, $50,000 will eventually make it to the "Symms for Senate" coffers.

The advance team for the Reagan visit rented 41 rooms at the Red Lion Riverside. Some of the team members were in Boise as far as three weeks in advance of Reagan's visit, Buxton said, planning the intricate security system and communications network that follows the president in his travels.

Buxton said there is some chance Reagan will make a return visit later in the campaign.

Messages between PLF leader, hijackers included

U.S. presents its case against Abbas

By BARRY SCHWEID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Messages between Palestine Liberation Front leader Mohammed Abbas and the four hijackers of the Achille Lauro are among the evidence offered by the Reagan administration to a U.S. court here to back the claim he was the "mastermind" of the ship seizure, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

The administration also submitted a history of past terrorist attacks by the Front in which captured members stated they got their instructions from Abbas, who was named by the Justice Department as a conspirator in the hijacking and hostage-taking.

The text of the messages was not released to the public on the grounds the evidence was "sealed" in order not to prejudice any future legal proceedings. Israeli intelligence was understood to have played a major role in providing the material to the U.S. government.

The messages were intercepted while the hijackers were still on the ship, said the U.S. official, who demanded anonymity.

He said other evidence included references to Abbas being known personally by the four Palestinians, now in Italian custody, and information showing they accepted instructions from him.

Abbas and the others were forced down in Sicily by U.S. jet fighters which intercepted an Egyptian plane carrying them from Cairo in search of sanctuary. The Front leader, described by Attorney General Edwin Meese III as an "international criminal" and the "mastermind" of the piracy, was permitted by Italy to fly to Yugoslavia Saturday night.

The Reagan administration is urging Italy to extradite the four Palestinians to try them in the murder of Leon Klinghoffer, a wheelchair-bound New Yorker who was a passenger on the cruise ship. The Yugoslav government, meanwhile, ignored urgent demands from Washington to arrest Abbas.

In accusing the 38-year-old associate of PLO chairman Yasser Arafat of conspiracy, the Reagan administration relied partly on a doctrine known to lawyers as "transferred intent."

That is, the official said, "there were various PLF admissions the seizure was the unintended outgrowth of a planned attack on Israel which he said he approved."

Gooding to give state prison plan close look

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

GOODING — Corrections Associates Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., will not be converting the old state tuberculosis hospital into a private, protective custody prison, Gooding Mayor Gene Heller said Tuesday.

"Our alternative is to look closer at the state proposal," Heller said. "We're not going to roll over and play dead."

Heller said he would have preferred a private prison, but that a state prison "would be a lot better than nothing. It would still be a maximum security approach."

The townspeople have been enthusiastic about a private prison and a private prison would provide tax revenues, unlike a government facility, he said.

Gooding will be holding a town meeting to see if residents want a state prison in the town, he said.

The town still has one private prison company, Buckingham Security, Ltd., of Lewisburg, Penn., interested in the project. However, the company has missed several financial deadlines and has yet to find backers for the $15 million needed for a complete remodeling of the old hospital.

Heller said that CAI had the $5 million it needed for the first phase of remodeling the hospital, but had been unable to find enough Western states willing to send prisoners to a private prison in Gooding.

There was a market for the prison

Auto workers strike Chrysler

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Some 80,000 autoworkers in the United States and Canada went on strike against Chrysler Corp. early Wednesday, minutes after their contract expired at midnight.

"It is unfortunate that we have to strike Chrysler Corp.," United Auto Workers president Owen Bieber said here at 10:10 p.m. MDT. "The union stands ready to reopen negotiations."

At 32 Chrysler Corp. plants in the United States, 70,000 workers represented by the UAW walked out. Ten thousand workers represented by the United Auto Workers of Canada went on strike at five plants owned by Chrysler Canada Ltd.

Second spaceport to be ready

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The Air Force declared America's second spaceport ready Tuesday for the first West Coast launch of a space shuttle next March 20 in a ceremony featuring six of the flight's seven astronauts.

President Reagan, in a congratulatory message, hailed the spaceport as "another giant step" for the shuttle program.

"We're ready to begin preparations for our launch early next year," Air Force Capt. Rick Sanford said of the flight in which the shuttle Discovery will be the first spacecraft to carry humans into polar orbit.

Nicaraguan rights suspended

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government issued a decree Tuesday night suspending civil rights because "the brutal agression by North America and its internal allies has created an extraordinary situation."

Among the rights suspended were free expression, public assembly, strikes and the privacy of postal communications.

The decree, signed by President Daniel Ortega, was read over national radio and television.

Musicians win hunger awards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rock musicians who contributed time and effort to raising money for starving Africans won Presidential World Without Hunger Awards on Tuesday.

Special awards went to the USA for Africa Foundation, Live Aid Foundation and the Band Aid Trust, brainchild of Irish rock star Bob Geldof.

USA for Africa, composed of a group of musicians, produced the hit record "We Are the World," raising $35 million for the African famine relief.

Geldof helped bring together musicians from around the world for Live Aid fund-raising concerts broadcast from Philadelphia and London. The event brought in $22 million, most of which went to Ethiopia and Sudan.

Meese eases ruling criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese said Tuesday that constitutional guarantees to protect the rights of the accused often fail to reflect the needs of the policeman on the beat.

But in a speech to the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Houston, Meese softened his criticism of the Supreme Court's 1966 ruling in the Miranda case, which held that suspects must be advised of their right to legal representation before police interrogation.

Meese had incurred the ire of civil liberties groups and some criminologists when, earlier this month, he said, "The thing is, you don't have many suspects who are innocent of a crime. If a person is innocent of a crime, then he is not a suspect."

Explosives carriers arrested

ROME (AP) — Two men carrying Moroccan passports were arrested Tuesday at Leonardo Da Vinci Airport after bomb-sniffing dogs discovered their luggage was stuffed with explosives, authorities said.

A police dog sniffed out a bomb weighing more than seven pounds in the false bottom of a suitcase belonging to Ben Kramwy, 23, when he arrived at the airport from Baghdad, Iraq, police said.

Rain falls over much of U.S.

By The Associated Press

Rain fell over much of the country Tuesday, and parts of the East basked in temperatures in the 80s and 90s, as much as 20 degrees warmer than normal for mid-October.

Light snow was reported in the Dakotas and western Minnesota.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from from the Texas Gulf Coast across the lower Mississippi Valley and from the upper Ohio Valley across Pennsylvania, New York and much of New England.

Increased benefits demanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two hundred senior citizens carted 130,000 petitions into a congressional hearing room Tuesday demanding higher Social Security benefits for so-called "notch babies" — people born from 1917 to 1921.

It was the latest skirmish in a continuing uphill battle to get Congress to reconsider the actions it took eight years ago to bring a runaway benefit formula under control.

People born in 1916 — those now 69 — who paid the maximum Social Security tax throughout their working careers are drawing benefits that in some cases are as much as $100 a month greater than from people born in 1917.

With sunny skies and light southwesterly winds, southern Idaho temperatures warmed into the 60s early Tuesday afternoon. Some valley locations were near 70 by 3 p.m. Temperatures in the 50s were limited to the cloudy northern panhandle.

Mullan was the coolest with 53 degrees. No rain was reported in the north.

Southeast to southwest winds were still blowing near 20 mph in the Spokane and Coeur d'Alene area.

In the upper Snake River Plain southwesterly winds were near 15 mph. Elsewhere winds remained light.

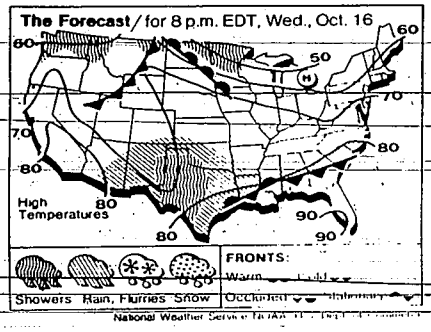

Highest temperature in the state Tuesday was 76 degrees at Hagerman, while Malad and Bear Lake recorded the low of 20 degrees.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho, Friday through Sunday, indicates fair with above normal temperatures. Highs in the 60s to lower 70s. Lows in the 30s.

The agricultural forecast for southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and harvesting will be good through the period. Dry weather with above normal temperatures will prevail. Soil temperatures for the potato harvest will be below 45 degrees between 3 a.m. and noon today and Thursday.

Generals' council advocated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military Joints Chiefs of Staff should be abolished and replaced by an advisory council of senior generals to combat mismanagement and interservice rivalry, according to a Senate staff report.

The 645-page report, prepared by the bipartisan staff of the Senate Armed Services Committee and scheduled for presentation to the committee today, said recurring conflict of interest is created by the fact that four of the five members of the joint chiefs responsible for overall planning and operations also head their respective services.

It said the uniformed chiefs of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force should dedicate their full time to their services without having additional planning duties.

Replacing the Joint Chiefs of Staff as principal advisers to the president would be a Joint Military Advisory Council composed of a chairman and a four-star officer from each of the services, under the recommendations.

To minimize inter-service rivalry, each of the five would be selected from among officers serving their last tour of duty.

The report was heralded in recent weeks in a series of speeches by Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., the committee chairman, and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the ranking Democratic member.

Both were severely critical of current military organization and operations.

At the Pentagon, Defense Department spokesman Robert B. Sims criticized the report, saying: "There hasn't been any input to it from this building."

"To the best of my knowledge, the report, this lengthy study, is really as I understand it a staff study by a small group within the Senate Armed Services Committee that has been presented to us only in a 40-minute briefing by its principal author," a staff member, Sims told reporters.

Sims said Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, who received the briefing, asked for backup data to support the conclusions but has yet to get it.

"We really find that the only thing so far that it offers are sweeping conclusory comments to the effect that things are terribly wrong with our military and need to be fixed," he continued.

"These kinds of conclusions without the data to back them up don't match up with our recent experience where last Thursday we had a military mission assigned by the president on very short notice to our military forces, which was carried out with skill, excellence, flawlessly."

farmer and vice president of the National Farm Organization, said American farmers already are the most efficient in the world. Rather than change the way they do business, he called on farmers to stick together in the face of adversity and fight attempts to take their land.

"In a war on poverty there can be no philosophical differences if we are to survive, and survive we must," Avila said.

He said an increase in spending on food from about 13 percent to 22 percent of family income could make the difference in prices farmers need to survive.

Later, Galen Guthrie of the Idaho Farm Borrowers Association urged farmers facing the loss of their land and equipment to seek "quick fixes," like low-interest Farmers Home Administration loans, before giving up.

"If you think that the marriage between you and your banker is about to come to an end, start looking for help before you hand him that check," Guthrie said.

As the president left Boise Tuesday afternoon aboard Air Force One, Sens. Jim McClure and Steve Symms, both R-Idaho, accompanied him to push for action on problems in the timber and semiconductor industries, as well as the farm crisis.

At the rally, Symms told the crowd that "The best thing we're going to be able to do for them (farmers) is to have Ronald Reagan, President Reagan, lead the charge to balance the budget."

service when the departments of corrections in 11 states were polled last year, Heller said.

"But in the meantime, there's been the procrastination and the inability of Buckingham to get funding," he said. "The delay has backed the states into a corner." States have since found other solutions for overcrowding and housing protective custody prisoners, he said.

Travis Snellings, president of CAI, was unavailable for comment. He did not return numerous telephone calls from The Times-News made this week and last.

State officials had been ready to sign letters of intent, but they had thought that the prison would be accepting prisoners by now, said Al Murphy, director of the Idaho Department of Corrections.

Arizona, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Utah and another state, which he declined to name, had all been interested in the plan, in addition to Idaho, he said.

A spokesperson for the Nevada Department of Corrections said Tuesday that the state had been interested in sending prisoners to the proposed Gooding prison four months ago, but that new Director of Prisons George Sumner was not supporting the project.

Arizona also has a new administrator managing its prison system, Murphy said.

Girard Sidorowicz, spokesman for the Washington Office of Financial Management, said "I thought it was a dead issue."

Prison officials in Oregon and Utah were unable to say if their states were interested in sending prisoners to Gooding.

Idaho state prison officials said last week that they were considering transforming the old tuberculosis hospital in Gooding into a state prison to help ease overcrowding in the penitentiary system.

Murphy said he plans to ask the Legislature for up to $22 million to build a new prison, but renovating the old hospital is also a possibility. One plan includes creating 200 semi-secure cells in the existing building and adding 200 secure cells behind the hospital at an estimated cost of $8 million, he told the Associated Press.

Murphy said no firm plans for remodeling would be started until December. The city has until the end of November to prove that a private company has committed the money for a prison. If money is not in place, the state will consider withdrawing a $350,000 block grant to provide sewer and water service to the proposed site.

Gooding city officials have been reporting that CAI was an established prison firm, operating six facilities. However, CAI office manager Jane Crimms said Tuesday that it was Corrections Corp. of America, also of Nashville, that operates six prisons. CAI operates none.

CAI was formed three months ago by employees who left CCA, she said. Snellings was a vice president of CCA before leaving to start the competing company, CAI, she said.

U.S. deplores Arab activist Odeh's death

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States deeply deplores and condemns in the strongest possible terms" the murder last Friday of Alex Odeh, a leader of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, the State Department said Tuesday.

"To think even for a moment that there exists justification for such heinous acts does grave injustice to the principles of political freedom upon which this country was founded," State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman said.

According to newspaper accounts, the bombing may have been touched off by a television interview last week in which Odeh suggested that the Palestine Liberation Organization had no role in the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro.

During a segment of the interview that was not broadcast, Odeh condemned the hijacking and terrorism in general, according to the accounts.

In first week back, Supreme Court faces heavy caseload

By JAMES H. RUBIN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court said Tuesday it will decide whether the public and news media have a right to attend pretrial hearings, the decisive stage in nine out of 10 criminal prosecutions.

The court thus agreed to settle a question left unnswered by two of its rulings since 1980 that granted the press and public the right to be present at criminal trials and at jury selection proceedings.

In the latest case, news agencies challenged their exclusion from a 41-day pretrial hearing for a California nurse, Robert Rubane Diaz, who later was convicted of killing 12 hospital patients.

Idaho has a similar prohibition, mandating closure of a preliminary hearing upon the request of a defendant.

In other developments Tuesday, the justices:

• Agreed to hear the appeal of South Carolina death row inmate Ronald Delroy Skipper, convicted of the 1982 strangling of Maryanne Wray.

• Agreed to decide whether federal government may force Indiana dentists to submit patients' X-rays to insurance companies as a cost-control move. A lower court said the dentists acted lawfully in withholding the dental records.

• Agreed to review the constitutionality of a former government policy that cut off some Social Security benefits to divorced spouses over 60 who remarried, but not to widows and widowers who remarried.

• Allowed California to impose a $250,000 limit on the amount a victim of medical malpractice may recover for such non-economic losses as pain and suffering. A California man who suffered a heart attack said the limit denied him adequate compensation for a late diagnosis that could shorten his life.

• Agreed to decide whether the government may prohibit Indians from capturing and killing bald and golden eagles. The court will review a ruling from South Dakota that allows federal officials to prosecute Indians for selling eagles and eagle parts but bars prosecution when the birds are killed on Indian reservations for use in tribal ceremonies.

• Agreed to take a new look at state laws that set time limits on when the mother of an illegitimate child may sue the alleged father for support payments. The court will review a Pennsylvania law that requires support claims to be filed within six years of the child's birth, or within two years from the time the reputed father stops making voluntary payments.

• Heard arguments in a church-state case from Pennsylvania over whether public high schools may permit student religious groups to meet during school hours.

In the press access case, the Riverside (Calif.) Press-Enterprise contends the public and news agencies have a right to attend pretrial hearings.

The newspaper is challenging its exclusion from the pretrial proceedings for Diaz, a coronary care nurse at the Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris, Calif. He later was sentenced to die in the killing of 12 elderly patients given overdoses of the heart-regulating drug lidocaine.

White House urges court to permit student prayer groups

By RICHARD CARELLI
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration on Tuesday urged the Supreme Court to allow student religious groups to meet for prayer and worship during public high school activity periods.

"Congress has concluded that high school students are sufficiently mature to make the same distinctions we all do between neutrality and endorsement," government lawyer Charles Fried told the court.

He said a federal appeals court decision that banned such meetings at a Williamsport, Pa., high school over the Equal Access Act of 1984.

In it, Congress made it unlawful for high schools receiving federal money and allowing some student groups to conduct meetings on school property to deny access to any student group based on what it proposes to discuss.

But during an hour-long argument session Tuesday, three justices raised the possibility that the court might not decide the constitutional issue presented in the Williamsport case.

Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, John Paul Stevens and William J. Brennan repeatedly questioned whether the case should be dismissed because of a procedural defect.

Fried and the two other lawyers who participated in the argument session suggested that such an outcome would be inconclusive and unsatisfactory.

The dispute, the latest outgrowth of the high court's 1962 decision outlawing organized prayer sessions in public schools, arose when students in 1981 sought permission to meet at Williamsport Area High School during twice-a-week activity periods.

During those periods, held during school hours, about 25 different student groups as varied as the Future Homemakers of America, the Spanish Club and the student newspaper meet.

Students also have the option of remaining in their homerooms, studying in the school library or seeking career guidance.

The students initially were granted permission to form a religious club, but after its initial meeting the club was told it would be "legally improper" for school officials to give the impression the meetings were endorsed or approved by the school.

About 45 of the school's 2,500 students attended the club's initial meeting.

The students sued, and a federal trial judge ruled for them. The religious club was allowed to meet during the 1983-84 school year.

But the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year ruled that allowing the meetings would violate the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

The 3rd Circuit's ruling had not been appealed to the 3rd Circuit Court by the full school board, but only by then-board member John C. Youngman Jr.

It was Youngman's "legal standing" to mount such a challenge that was questioned by several justices Tuesday.

Fried suggested that Congress' interest would best be served by reversing the appeals court as a matter of constitutional law.

Briefly

POW search effort continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon said Tuesday it continues to keep an open mind as to whether American prisoners of war remain in Southeast Asia following a report that ousted national security adviser Robert McFarlane as saying U.S. efforts to find them have been inadequate.

"Our policy hasn't changed on this subject, and that is that we have had numerous life sightings reported," Defense Department spokesman Robert B. Sims said. "We investigate each one of those.

Colleges win 'Star Wars' cash

WASHINGTON (AP) — American university scientists, targets of a campaign to boycott research on the Pentagon's Strategic Defense Initiative, received $28 million in SDI funding over the past 12 months, according to a contract list obtained Tuesday.

University-based research for strategic defense amounted to about 2.5 percent of the $1.095 billion in disbursments listed for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

Volcker kills hints of World Bank acceptance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker, declaring "I'm here, I'm staying," on Tuesday put an end to speculation that he might leave his post to become president of the World Bank.

"To slightly misquote the great American writer Mark Twain: the reports of my demise are greatly exaggerated," Volcker told a business conference sponsored by the American Stock Exchange.

Volcker also said this nation's current trade deficit, approaching $150 billion, was "unsustainable," and that basic reforms were needed to ease down the value of the dollar and to restore economic equilibrium both at home and abroad.

He said the United States must reduce its own $200 billion annual budget deficit and that other nations must take steps to stimulate their economies.

"There is no magic in manipulating exchange rates alone" and Fed action to try to drive the dollar further down with a more accommodating monetary policy is not an option, Volcker said.

He said action last week by the Senate — endorsed by the Reagan administration — to mandate a balanced federal budget in six years was a "very constructive" step toward putting this nation's financial house in order. However, he said that living up to such budget discipline would be politically difficult.

PAUL VOLCKER
Will stay with the Fed

Volcker, whose term as Fed chairman runs through August 1987, was asked by a member of the audience about the rumors of an impending job switch to the World Bank.

"I'm here. I'm staying. Nothing is forever — but that is the way things are at the moment," Volcker said.

Volcker's remarks, his first public utterance on the speculation since it began circulating last month, brought a hearty round of applause from the luncheon audience of bankers and investment officials.

Volcker called the World Bank "a very prestigious institution for which I have great respect" that he said would play a role of increasing importance in the months ahead in grappling with the Third World debt crisis.

"The question arose some time ago, whether that was an appropriate place that I might think about. And, in in spite of all those things I said about it, my answer is no," Volcker added.

Volcker said government intervention in currency markets — following an agreement reached at a meeting in New York last month among finance ministers of the five major industrialized nations to work together to drive down the value of the dollar — would have limited impact in easing down the dollar.

Volcker said that the nation's economy "as a whole is doing quite well," but that this level of economic performance cannot long be sustained in light of the unrealistically strong dollar and the accompanying trade deficit.

"Sooner or later these problems will catch up with us," Volcker said.

Panel approves tax cut for banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee on Tuesday voted a $1-billion-a-year tax cut for the banking industry and agreed to retain most of the charitable contribution deductions now allowed people who do not itemize.

To pay for the charitable deduction, the panel approved an amendment that would mean a slightly lower standard deduction for most Americans than was agreed to last week.

After those actions, the panel temporarily laid aside its work on tax overhaul and prepared to negotiate with the Senate on a plan to force a balanced budget by 1991. However, aides to Rep. Dan Rostenowski, D-Ill., chairman of the committee, said he does not intend to let the budget fight force tax reform onto a back burner.

Here is what the committee did Tuesday:

• Voted to allow taxpayers who do not itemize deductions to continue writing off a portion of their contributions to charity. Under present law, those people may deduct half of what they give this year; for 1986, the full donation would be deductible. Under the committee plan, whose key elements were approved on a 22-13 vote, non-itemizers would be allowed to deduct in full their contributions above $100 a year; the deduction would become permanent law.

President Reagan and Rostenkowski had recommended repeal of the deduction. Reps. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., and Judd Gregg, R-N.H., led the fight in the committee's closed-door session to keep the deduction.

• To finance retention of the write-off, most people above low-income levels would be permitted a standard deduction that is considerably above current levels but slightly below what the committee adopted last week. The standard deduction is used only by taxpayers who do not itemize.

Couples filing a joint return and with income up to $14,000 would have a minimum deduction of $5,250, compared with $3,670 under present law. Those with incomes between $14,000 and $16,000 would get $5,850; those above $16,000, a $5,750 standard deduction. For single people, whose deduction now is $2,480, the new deduction would be $3,525 for those with incomes up to $8,000; $3,475 for those between $8,000 and $9,000, and $3,425 for incomes over $9,000.

Sure, George says, No ties to Moonies

Notice how whenever anyone asks George Hansen where the money comes from for his various projects, he hides behind the desire to protect the "privacy" of his contributors?

Old George was up to his tricks again this week over a series of advertisements he has planned for television on the abuses of the Internal Revenue Service.

The ads, which the White House has asked George to cease because they distort President Reagan's position on the subject and use Reagan quotes out of context, have been refused in several markets, including Seattle.

George won't say who's paying for the ads. Privacy, you know. But guess where the ads were produced?

At an East-coast company near Washington, D.C. called Atlantic Video, which just happens to be owned by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church.

Now George is certainly crafty. His anti-IRS book — coauthored by former aide and now state Sen. Larrey Anderson of Twin Falls — has a chapter praising Moon and saying what a raw deal Moon got from the IRS for tax evasion.

Who published the book, an estimated 100,000 copies of which were distributed during his campaign last fall? Again, George refused to say, just as he did when the $900,000 secret Glenns Ferry bank account surfaced last year an he was asked where the money came from and to whom it went.

But when you look at George as a convicted felon about to go to jail, there aren't too many respectable folks who still back him, much less put money into his schemes.

That leaves those who want something and who thrives on a felon congressmen and a few thick-headed Idaho legislators singing his praises. Like Moon, who doesn't mind buying respectability if he has to.

George claims he doesn't get any support from the Unification Church. If you believe that, folks, we've got this bridge over the Snake River we'd like to sell you.

PLO stands for terrorism

The world's biggest liar told the truth for once 10 years ago. Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, invited to speak before the United Nations, although he had no nation to represent, appeared holding what he called "a freedom gun" in one hand and a threatening index finger of the other hand, calling it an "olive branch" suggesting us to choose his philosophy, otherwise dire results and destruction would be visited on all countries not adopting his terroristic way of life.

The late honorable Sen. Henry Jackson of the state of Washington, (God bless him) had the courage to condemn Arafat's murderous threats stating: "That terror has entered the sacred Halls of Justice, threatening us with shameful blackmail."

Once again, if the United Nations invites the PLO leader, Arafat and his cohorts, Arafat will in all likelihood rave at, and insult our nation.

How soon we forget in view of the experiences in terrorism we have suffered.

Interestingly enough, the Constitution of the United States does not permit anti-Democratic forces to attack the United States of America in any public forum of our country, or small powers seeking the protection of the United Nations and the United States on American soil.

U.S. heading for slavery

What will likely be the result of the planned summit meeting between the Soviet Union's Gorbachev and President Reagan? The answer: Another worthless treaty which the Communists will violate to their advantage.

When have the Soviets ever kept a treaty, pledge or agreement? There are thousands of treaties and agreements they have broken. Many of the countries that signed those treaties are now occupied by Communist troops — like Afghanistan.

In 1942, the Soviets agreed, via the Atlantic Charter, that they would seek no territorial expansion from World War II. They then swallowed up East Germany and a score of other nations. In 1955 they agreed at Geneva to "reunification of Germany by means of free elections." But those elections have never been held.

Why should President Reagan meet with Gorbachev and negotiate with him? He is a murderer! American leaders say they will not negotiate with terrorists like the PLO, but Gorbachev is the head of a world-wide network of terrorists.

The Soviets have broken every arms agreement with us to gain military advantage. Signed treaties with the Communists is worse than folly — it's suicidal!

The Soviet Union has been kept alive by massive transfusions of U.S. aid, credits and technology. The U.S. taxpayer has literally been paying for his own destruction. It is time to demand that this suicidal aid to communism be stopped before we too become a Soviet-style slave nation.

Toeing the line to free trade will undermine U.S. economy

Christopher Layne

Because global influence and military strength depend on a strong economy, the United States should renounce free trade in favor of mercantilism: a policy that explicitly recognizes the need to place the nation's economic interests first in order to preserve its geopolitical power.

No nation can be a great power without maintaining its basic industries, even if they are uncompetitive in the international economy.

Free trade is an attractive theory. But we live in a mercantilist world. Our chief economic competitors, Western Europe and Japan, erect tariff and non-tariff barriers to other exports, subsidize their own export industries and control the export of their capital and technology.

The developing industrial nations — Brazil, South Korea, Singapore, Taiwan — do the same. As America reaches industrial maturity, other nations are turning the multilateral free-trade system to our disadvantage. We should acknowledge those realities in our own economic policies.

As Johns Hopkins Professor David Calleo has observed, the postwar free-trade system flourished because "expanding prosperity ... permitted a game with many winners and few losers." However, as "growth slowed, free trade was hurting more and more domestic interests everywhere, and the essentially mercantilist character of states was reasserting itself."

Under such conditions, international economics diverges from the comparative-advantage, free model and begins to resemble a zero-sum game as governments become more conscious of the political and strategic ramifications of economic policy.

Free-traders justify their position by positing that under the doctrine of comparative advantage, everyone will gain something from international free trade.

In strategic terms, however, the key question is not "Will everyone gain something?" but "Who gains the most?" It is the latter question that should guide Washington's international economic policy.

Viewed in historical perspective, the United States is at a juncture similar to Great Britain's at the turn of the century.

The outward flow of British capital and technology, combined with the growth of tariff-protected competing industries in rival nations, enabled the United States, Germany and Japan to gain an ever-increasing economic and political advantage over England.

Although free trade actually undermined London's geopolitical interests, comparative advantage remained the intellectual basis of British trade policy.

> "No nation can be a great power without maintaining its basic industries, even if they are uncompetitive. . . ."

Few analysts, notably Joseph Chamberlain and J.A. Hobson, recognized that England could remain a great power only by adopting mercantilist policies that protected its domestic economy at the expense of its international economic commitments.

Chamberlain and Hobson were right: Commitment to a free-trade system that no longer advanced its interests was a critical factor in the collapse of British power.

For a nation suffering from political and economic decline, as America is, mercantilism is the most prudent economic strategy.

Even those of us who believe in the theoretical superiority of free-market solutions must face the fact that the international economy is inherently mercantilistic and that, in a mercantilist world, free trade must end at the water's edge.

As Adam Smith said, "Defense is much more important than opulence." Thus, the thrust of our economic policy should be to maximize increase our power relative to that of other states. In this context national security is more important than economic efficiency.

Mercantilism does not mean that we no longer would have trade relations with the rest of the world. But America's approach to international economic policy must change. Trade should occur within a framework that enhances our fundamental national economic and security interests.

International economic policy is too vital an instrument of statecraft, and the economy is too important as the essential foundation of national strength, to be left solely to private decision-making in a market context.

The fundamental objectives of a mercantilist policy are clear: to link American international economic policy to overall national-security policy, to preserve America's vital industries, to control domestic inflation, to discourage the outflow of capital and technology and encourage domestic savings and investment, and to minimize American dependence on markets and sources of raw materials over which our strategic control is tenuous.

America has reached a historical turning point. Rather than attempting to salvage the postwar free-trade system, we should focus instead on developing a new American international economic policy based on sound principles of political economy.

Senate abdicates its power in vote on deficit amendment

Haynes Johnson

WASHINGTON — One day, in the year before his death, Hubert H. Humphrey escorted me into his small, private Senate hideaway in the Capitol, closed the door and began a tape-recorded conversation that lasted several hours.

The purpose was not social; I was gathering material for a book about the politics of Washington and the workings of government during the Carter years, and the former vice president was a prime source of information.

He was, of course, a great student-and practitioner-of government. When I asked what had been the greatest change since he came to the Congress, he instantly replied:

"Up until the time of Woodrow Wilson, with the exception of Teddy Roosevelt, we had congressional government. Congress was the predominating influence. That changed. The president became the predominating influence.

"Now Congress has asserted itself again. I can't overemphasize the importance of this. Congress is no longer afraid of the executive-particularly when you look at things like the budget.

"I've heard dozens of people up here say, 'Well, I know that Carter's got that in his budget, but what's our budget say?'

"And I'll tell you something I hear people say now that you never heard before: 'I've seen them come and go, and I'm still here.'

"They're talking about presidents, you know. I've run through seven of them myself."

With that 1977 conversation in mind, I keep wondering how Humphrey would have reacted to the shameful political charade played out last week in Washington, by the very body of legislators that he so loved, the Senate. No one can know for sure, but my bet is he would have been saddened — and outraged.

The overwhelming vote by the Senate to require a balanced budget by 1991 is more than abdication of responsibility and a sign of political failure on its part.

It is a blank check for the president, signaling a dramatic reversal in the shift of powers back to the presidency from the Congress, a shift in the opposite direction from that hailed by Humphrey.

It's also a riveting example of the failure-abject capitulation is a better term-of the Democratic Party to offer a reasoned, responsible political alternative to the Reagan presidency and its gilted budget priorities that to a large extent got us into the present deficit debacle. They allowed themselves to be stampeded, and they ran.

As Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., one of the most thoughtful of the Democrats, put it last week, "This legislation shows Congress at its worst."

I believe Bradley's words, written on the eve of the vote, will stand out admirably after all the ducking and political posturing of last week have been forgotten.

"Instead of once again grappling on a bipartisan basis with the tough decisions, particularly on taxes," he said, "Congress appears poised in a moment of irrationality and timidity to give Ronald Reagan the sole power to reorder the priorities of the national government. It will be an action that we will all live to regret."

Behind this action lies a more significant political development: the ratification, if you will, of the Senate's willingness to place its powers and authority in the hands of the president because it lacks the will to act.

By this action, Reagan has won. Much of the political history of relations between Congress and president that people such as Humphrey prized as important will have to be rewritten. It's quite recent history, too.

During the Vietnam-Watergate years, concern centered on the "imperial presidency" and the growing accumulation of power in the hands of the chief executive.

Fears were expressed that a supine, deferential Congress was becoming a rubber stamp for the White House. But those also were the years in which Congress fought — and won — a battle to regain its lost powers.

The fight took two forms. In both foreign and domestic affairs Congress fought to limit the power of the president to act without its consent.

In foreign affairs, congressional enactment of a War Powers Resolution in 1973 directly checked the president's power to act alone in involving the United States in armed conflicts It was the result of congressional determination to avoid further Vietnams.

In domestic affairs, the establishment in 1974 of Congress's own budget office gave the legislators greater power over the purse. Until then, Congress had been a hostage of executive department proposals that shaped the federal budget. Through its own budget office, gathering its own information, Congress sought and did regain much of its authority over the dispensing of federal funds.

As House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., expressed the importance of that shift to me, during an interview several years ago in which he passionately pounded on his desk to make even stronger his point:

"The change in Congress had come. We had recaptured our powers to the extent that we were almost an equal voice. The press didn't read it. Jimmy Carter didn't read it.

"They didn't appreciate the power and the strength of the Congress of the United States. Jimmy Carter thought he was going to be another president with the powers of a Nixon or a Kennedy or a Johnson, and he didn't have 'em when he arrived here."

It is now left to O'Neill and other members of the House to save the Senate and the country from the damage that threatens to be done.

Officials suspect arson in 3 of major S. California fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters used chemical-laden air tankers Tuesday to battle Southern California wildfires that had burned at least 29,000 acres and 19 houses, and killed a man defending his home from the flames.

Arson was suspected in three of the major fires, officials said.

Federal and state workers joined local firefighters at hot spots across a 100-mile, four-county area from the coast west of Los Angeles to San Bernardino County.

Pepperdine University canceled classes Tuesday because the main artery through the area, Pacific Coast Highway, was closed to all but emergency traffic about 8 a.m. Two Malibu-area elementary schools were also closed, and bus service for Santa Monica High School students was canceled.

Hot, dry desert winds had lowered the humidity to 10 percent, turning parched brushland into a firefighters' nightmare, and on Tuesday airplanes laden with fire-snuffing chemicals targeted two blazes roaring near Malibu.

The Santa Ana winds, which blew persistently Monday, died down Tuesday, said county fire inspector Mike Pearson.

"We had the fire burning right up to the walls of the (Malibu) sheriff's office" Tuesday morning, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Ronald Wallach. "It was like being within 100 yards of a napalm strike."

Officials said one man dropped dead of attack defending his home Monday in Box Canyon, about 30 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

In Piuma Canyon, a blaze burned an estimated 3,300 acres, destroying its sixth house and blackening the earth for two miles around the Malibu civic center, 30 miles west of downtown Los Angeles. Wallach said. The blaze was reported 30 percent contained Tuesday afternoon.

"We have a saying around here: They'll stop it at the kelp line," he quipped. "We haven't lost any beach yet."

A second fire that broke out in the humidity to 10 percent, turning parched brushland into a firefighters' nightmare, and on nearby Decker Canyon had burned across 5,800 acres, but no structures were threatened, said county fire Capt. Gordon Pearson. It had burned four houses and a garage Monday, but was reported 50 percent contained at noon.

"Arson is always suspected in fires like these," Pearson said, adding it was probably more than "a strange coincidence three fires started within 15 minutes in the same general area."

Eight air tankers began dumping chemicals just after dawn on the Piuma and Decker Canyon fires, as fire officials hoped to gain an upper hand. Pearson was cautiously optimistic Tuesday afternoon.

"We're starting to get some containment" he said, but no projections for control had been made.

In Wheeler Canyon, 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles, and a few miles north of Santa Paula, six homes, two trailers and several outbuildings were destroyed by a 11,000-acre blaze that combined with another fire and raged untamed Tuesday, said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Kathy Good.

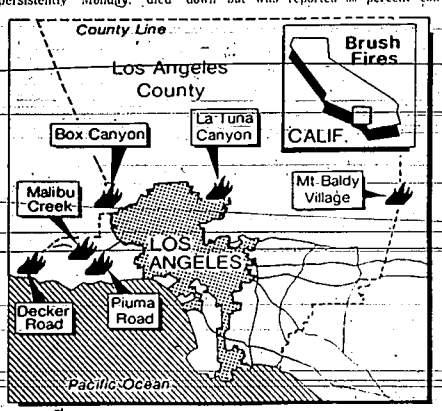

Ventura County fire spokeswoman Dana DeDiana said the department called in all available firefighters Monday as blazes erupted throughout the county.

That blaze, 30 miles northwest of Los Angeles, burned about 1,600 acres by Tuesday morning and was 99 percent contained. Box Canyon Road residents said at least one home there burned.

In Ventura County, two other fires estimated at more than 1,000 acres were reported out of control Tuesday afternoon, said Hank Weston of the California Department of Forestry. No structures were lost in either fire, but the Peachhill fire near Santa Rosa was threatening 200-300 homes and evacuations had been ordered, he said.

Another house and four sheds were destroyed on Mount Gleason in the Angeles National Forest, 25 miles north of downtown Los Angeles. About 500 acres had burned there, and the blaze was still out of control Tuesday afternoon.

National Weather Service meteorologist Frankie Shaw said winds were gusting up to 28 mph in some Southern California areas, compared with 50-mph Monday. The relative humidity was 10 percent or lower and temperatures were in the 80s.

'Copter plunges into ocean, killing 15 Marines; 4 rescued

Officials said 15 Marines were killed and four rescued.

The twin-rotor CH-46D "Sea Knight" helicopter, flown by a crew of four, crashed in 50 feet of water about four miles off shore on takeoff from the USS Guadalcanal, said Gunnery Sgt. John Simmons.

One body was recovered shortly after the 6 a.m. accident and four survivors were plucked from the water near the carrier-like helicopter and troop ship, Simmons said.

Navy and Marine divers conducted a search and rescue operation in Onslow Bay much of the day for more survivors, but Simmons said the effort was called off in late afternoon and hope had been abandoned of finding anyone else alive.

Names of the dead were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The cause of the accident was under investigation.

It was the third-worst loss of life in a Marine aviation accident. On May 6, 17 Marines were killed when their CH-53D "Super Sea Stallion" helicopter crashed into the sea off southern Japan. Eighteen Marines and 11 South Korean Marines were killed when another Sea Stallion crashed into a South Korean mountain in March 1984.

The four survivors from Tuesday's crash were in good condition aboard the ship, said a Marine Corps statement read by Sgt. Pamela Vajner of the Camp Lejeune public affairs office.

On Tuesday afternoon the Guadalcanal sat in choppy waters about 4 to 4½ miles offshore while several small boats circled at its stern, said Barry Thomas, Jacksonville Daily News photographer who flew over the ship.

Simmons described the CH-46D as "a very safe aircraft for us," and said, "It's real good. It's been in the inventory since Vietnam." He said he didn't have any statistics on the safety record of the helicopter.

The Marines were based at Camp Lejeune and its New River Air Station, said Staff Sgt. Terry Ruggels, also of the Camp Lejeune public affairs office.

The accident occurred not far from the Marine Corps' Onslow Beach, just east of Camps Geiger and Lejeune, where Marines practice beach landings, but the Marines said the ship's exact location was unknown.

The helicopter was assigned to Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 263 at Cherry Point, N.C. The CH-46 is the principal assault helicopter of the Marine Corps and also is used extensively by the Navy to carry cargo and passengers between ships and shore facilities.

U.S. reiterates clemency appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department reaffirmed Tuesday its opposition to South Africa's planned execution of Ben Moloise, who was convicted in the death of a black policeman.

Moloise, whose appeal for a new trial was denied by President P. W. Botha, is scheduled to be executed on Friday.

State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman noted that the United States supported a U.N. Security Council resolution in 1984 calling on South African authorities not to execute Moloise.

"Our position is well known to the South African government and has been repeated recently concerning our request for clemency," he said.

Air travel talks begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union opened talks Tuesday about resuming direct air travel between the two countries.

The aim is to reach an agreement before President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev hold a summit meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 19-20.

But a U.S. official involved in the negotiations said the outcome was not clear. "It's very hard to predict when you're going to reach an agreement with the Soviet Union, as it is with other foreign governments," he said.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said Pan Am, the American carrier, wanted to be sure it could compete effectively with Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, for passengers.

He said U.S. negotiators were determined to see to it that Pan Am got a "fair shake." Pan Am is known to be interested in flying through the Soviet Union between Western Europe and India.

All Soviet landing rights in the United States were suspended by Reagan in 1981 as partial retaliation for Soviet "repression in Poland" and canceled in 1983 after the imposition of martial law in Poland.

There had been two flights a week between the two countries.

Fire victims reach settlement

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Victims of a 1981 fire that killed eight people and injured 198 at the Las Vegas Hilton agreed Tuesday to a $22.8 million settlement from more than 40 defendants.

Attorneys gathered before District Judge Paul Goldman to sign final papers guaranteeing the payment, minus attorney fees, to 109 plaintiffs. Six other people, security guards at the resort, settled separately for a total of $50,000.

Attorney Neil Galatz, who represented most of the plaintiffs, said relatives of the eight people who died in the blaze will get the largest payments.

A fire started by a busboy in an eighth-floor lounge area sent flames shooting up the side of the 31-story resort in the early evening hours of Feb. 10, 1981. Most of those killed were felled by smoke inhalation in their rooms or in hallways of the massive hotel-casino.

The busboy, Phillip Cline, was later convicted of eight counts of first-degree murder and is serving multiple life terms in the Nevada State Prison.

Galatz said the hotel will pay $16.5 million and the other defendants will split the remainder. Among the defendants were the hotel's architect, company's involveed in its construction and firms that supplied the interior finishings and furniture.

Galatz said plaintiffs in the Hilton case will receive more money "on a per capita basis" than was paid out in a settlement to victims of the MGM Grand fire that killed 85 people only 21 months before the Hilton blaze.

The MGM and other defendants settled in 1983 for $167 million on 1,357 claims. But disputes over insurance coverage of the payments continued until April when the MGM was awarded $76 million in payments from 63 insurance companies.

Hunger stamp goes on sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmasters and congressmen sang "We Are The World" at the campaign of Phyllis AlRoy of Princeton, N.J., to put the message "Help End Hunger" on a postage stamp became reality Tuesday in a Capitol Hill ceremony.

These stamps "are more than miniature pieces of art, they are powerful motivators," said Postmaster General Paul N. Carlin, recalling how a previous stamp urging Americans to give blood sparked a dramatic increase in donors.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, who used his clout as head of the subcommittee that oversees the Postal Service to get the 120 million commemorative stamps issued, said he would use one of the first stamps to mail a letter to President Reagan saying a greater national commitment is required to end hunger at home and abroad.

The stamps go on sale nationwide Wednesday.

"We Are The World" was recorded by American rock musicians in an effort to raise money for starving Africans.

Officials charge 2 more Palestinians

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Investigators issued arrest warrants Tuesday for two more Palestinians, bringing to seven the number of people charged in the hijacking of the Achille Lauro during a Mediterranean cruise that began in this northern port Oct. 3.

Gennaro Calabrese de Feo, chief prosecutor of Genoa, would not identify the two Palestinians, reveal the charges against them or say if they were in custody.

Italian news agencies said one was aboard the Italian cruise liner and left it in Alexandria, Egypt, the last stop before the hijacking. They said the second bought the cruise tickets in Genoa that the four pirates used.

Judicial sources said at least one accomplice in Genoa helped the four hijackers. The sources, who spoke on the condition they were not identified, quoted the accused pirates as telling interrogators that explosives and submachine guns were put in their cabin before they boarded.

Those charged with taking over the Achille Lauro on Oct. 7 have been moved from Sicily to a prison in Spoleto, in the Umbrian hills 80 miles north of Rome.

Spoleto, where the performing arts Festival of Two Worlds is held each summer, also has a maximum security prison where many Italian terrorists have been held.

A spokesman at Spoleto's national police barracks said they were being kept at the prison in the Maiano section of the city, where they were taken from Siracusa's 16th century prison Monday by armed convoy.

They surrendered to negotiators from the Palestine Liberation Organization last Wednesday, two days after the hijacking of the Achille Lauro began off Port Said, and were held in Egyptian custody.

U.S. Navy jet fighters intercepted an Egyptian airliner carrying them out of the country and forced it to land Friday at a NATO air base in Sicily.

Genoa prosecutors charged a 21-year-old Palestinian on Monday with conspiracy to hijack a ship and kidnapping. De Feo confirmed that the man was Kaiaf Mohammed Zainab, who got off a Tunisian liner at Genoa with both an Iraqi and a Moroccan passport and has been in jail since Sept. 28.

Officials said investigators boarded the Achille Lauro on its voyage home from Port Said, northern entrance to the Suez Canal, outside which it was seized.

The news agency ANSA said magistrates Francesco Meloni and Luigi Carli of Genoa, along with Siracusa prosecutors Dolcino Favi and Roberto Pennisi, planned to question Capt. Gerardo de'Rosa and crew members who might have witnessed the fate of Leon Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old American passenger the pirates are accused of murdering and throwing overboard.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Mohammed Abbas apparently had another brief brush over the weekend with the USS Saratoga, whose jets had forced him down in Sicily, but the PLO said the guerrilla leader had left Yugoslavia by Tuesday.

The near-encounter with the American aircraft carrier came in the Adriatic resort of Dubrovnik, after Italian authorities set Abbas free despite a U.S. request to hold him in connection with the hijacking of an Italian cruise liner last week.

The Saratoga made a delayed port call at Dubrovnik on Saturday, the day after its F-14 fighters forced an Egyptian jetliner carrying Abbas and the four hijackers of the Achille Lauro to land at a NATO base in Sicily.

Reports indicated that Abbas spent about an hour less than three miles from the ship waiting at Dubrovnik airport for a connecting flight to Belgrade while the carrier was anchored offshore.

Abbas' Yugoslav Airlines plane flew directly over the Saratoga on its way from Dubrovnik to Belgrade. Soon after that, U.S. authorities were asking the Yugoslav government to arrest him.

The guerrilla chief, who helped negotiate the end of the hijacking, was hidden in Belgrade by the diplomatic mission of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The PLO said he left Yugoslavia on Monday, but did not give his destination.

Abbas, 38, said in an interview broadcast Tuesday in Italy that he "was only responsible for the mediation and freeing the ship," and had nothing to do with the hijacking.

The interview was obtained by TG-1 radio and broadcast by RAI television, both of which are owned by the Italian government. Spokesmen for the radio station would not say where Abbas was at the time of the interview.

He challenged U.S. authorities to prove his involvement in the hijacking. "I am responsible only for the mediation and freeing of the ship," he said, "and this work I did in collaboration with the Egyptian authorities and on the request of Arafat. I was never on the hijacked ship."

Abbas said the hijackers had been told before they surrendered and left the Achille Lauro that they would be tried by Palestinians.

The Saratoga's port call had been scheduled a month earlier, but was delayed for nearly two days because of the intercept mission.

As Abbas left Dubrovnik, U.S. Ambassador John Scanlon and officers of the Saratoga were at a reception with Yugoslav military and government officials, according to U.S. diplomats, passengers on the Abbas flight and other sources who reported the coincidence.

U.S. diplomats declined official comment. One said privately that American officials in Dubrovnik could hardly have known Abbas was nearby, and even if they had there would have been no attempt to seize him.

Washed up body not yet identified

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Western diplomats said Tuesday they believed the decomposed body of an elderly man that washed ashore near the Syrian port of Tartus was that of Leon Klinghoffer, but final identification had not yet been made.

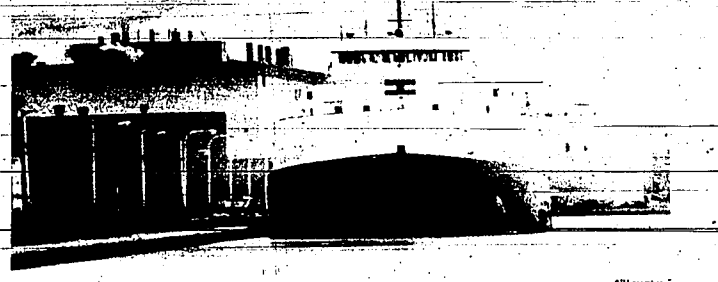

Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old American passenger confined to a wheelchair, was reported killed and thrown overboard by four Palestinian gunmen who hijacked the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro last week. The killing was said to have occurred Oct. 8, when the ship was off Tartus.

The hijackers, now in Italian custody, have denied they killed anyone during the two-day takeover, which began Oct. 7 off Port Said, Egypt, and ended two days later when the gunmen surrendered to Palestine Liberation Organization officials.

However, Lebanese radio monitors intercepted exchanges between the hijackers and Tartus port authorities on Oct. 8 in which a hijacker who called himself Omar was heard to say: "We have thrown him in the water. We have shot him once in the head. His wife is wailing." They did not identify the victim.

CBS reported Tuesday night that it had learned from unidentified sources that the body which washed ashore in Syria had a bullet wound to the head.

The body was found Monday near Tartus, 70 miles northwest of Damascus, and was brought to the Syrian capital Tuesday. Western diplomatic sources and a physician who saw the body said it appeared to have been in the sea for at least a week and had been severely disfigured by fish and the effects of the Mediterranean salt water.

Collapsed lock wall blocks St. Lawrence seaway traffic

THOROLD, Ontario (AP) — Ships carrying grain, steel and military equipment backed up Tuesday on the St. Lawrence Seaway, and one official predicted it would be weeks before a collapsed lock wall would be repaired and traffic allowed to resume.

"It's absolutely impossible to give an idea of the exact length of time," Seaway Authority President William A. O'Neil said about the repairs.

"We're not looking for a permanent repair," he said. "Our primary objective is to get navigation going. But I fully expect we will be open before the end of the shipping season."

John Adams, deputy chief engineer for the St. Lawrence Development Corp., the U.S. operator of the waterway, said about 55 ships were involved — 15 moored in Lake Ontario waiting to go west, seven in the Welland Canal, eight in Lake Erie and another 25 at other Great Lakes ports.

Adams said that number could increase as more ships steam into the system.

The Welland, which links the Atlantic Ocean, the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario with the rest of the Great Lakes, is scheduled to close for the winter at the end of December.

A 125-foot-long piece of a wall in Lock No. 7 of the canal dislodged Monday, trapping the Liberian freighter Furia for about eight hours. The Furia was headed from Milwaukee to Alexandria, Egypt, with 16,800 metric tons of grain aboard. No one was injured.

The Furia managed to back out of the lock Monday night after the chamber was filled with water to help support the weakened wall.

O'Neil said he would meet Wednesday with ship owners in Ottawa to discuss the damage and prospects of restoring shipping.

"We have as much interest in getting this thing back in service as quickly as possible as anybody else," O'Neil said. "We know what it means to the economy of the country — both the United States and Canada. We're well aware of what shipping schedules are. We know that there are critical dates that people have to meet."

Michael Pipia, commercial manager of Detroit's Fednav Lake Services Inc., said his shipping company had seven or eight ships tied up. Among the cargo, he said, is military equipment for the U.S. Army in Europe and steel for auto factories in Michigan and elsewhere in the Midwest.

Tiniest open heart surgery patient does well

LONDON (AP) — A baby girl, who at 15 inches was believed to be the smallest person ever to survive open heart surgery, is at home and doing well a Brompton Hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

Surgeons wearing magnifying glasses opened the tiny chest of Sarah Floyd to repair a hole in her 2-inch-wide heart when she was three weeks old.

The spokesman said she weighed less than four pounds when the operation was performed six weeks ago.

She was born four weeks prematurely with severe heart defects and doctors mended a hole in her heart, repaired a valve and reconnected misrouted veins. "As far as we know, nowhere in the world has the operation been performed on a baby so small," said the spokesman, who in accordance with British practice declined to be identified by name.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A collision between a truck and a bus killed 12 people and injured nine at Bunder village near Cirebon, west Java, the official Antara News Agency reported Tuesday.

It quoted a police spokesman as saying that all those killed Monday night were aboard the truck, which was carrying 20 people. Passengers aboard the bus received slight injuries, the report said, adding that there was heavy rain at the time of the collision.

Roof collapses, killing at least 50 students

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The roof of a packed auditorium collapsed during heavy rain Tuesday night, killing at least 50 students and injuring more than 300, survivors and rescue officials reported.

Hundreds of tons of girders and cement crashed down on about 500 Dhaka University students who were watching a popular television program at about 9 p.m., during a heavy rain caused by a storm approaching the southern coast from the Bay of Bengal.

Students and officials at the scene said the toll could be much higher. They said the roof had been under repair.

The storm bore down on Bangladesh and southeastern India Tuesday night, with wind gusts reported at up to 93 miles an hour. Thousands of people were evacuated from offshore islands and coastal districts. Torrential rain and high seas lashed the region.

Many of those injured were in critical condition. State television appealed for blood donations, but many students who answered the call said hospitals were not able to handle the influx of donors.

Dhaka's three main civilian hospitals were packed with victims, brought in by ambulances or by fellow students carrying people on their backs because of a shortage of stretchers.

Rescue operations were hampered by the rain, lack of equipment and a lack of power in the ruined building.

The army brought in a large crane to help clear the rubble. Muniruzzaman Badal, president of university's student league, said many bodies still were buried.

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass said Tuesday that hundreds of families were left homeless by the weekend earthquake that rocked the central Asian republic of Tadzhikistan, but gave few details about deaths and damage.

"Hundreds of families who were left homeless have been moved to hotels, sanitoriums and schools," the official news agency said in a brief report from Dushanbe, the republic's capital.

"Tents are being raised in courtyards and hot meals are being organized," Tass said.

Tass earlier reported that the epicenter of Sunday night's quake was about 145 miles northeast of Dushanbe. It said factories, offices and homes were destroyed and there was "loss of life," but gave no details.

The Soviet Union often does not report fatalities in natural disasters, and the Tass report of loss of life in the quake could indicate heavy casualties.

Officials suspect arson in 3 of major S. California fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters used chemical-laden air tankers Tuesday to battle Southern California wildfires that had burned at least 29,000 acres and 19 houses, and killed a man defending his home from the flames.

Arson was suspected in three of the major fires, officials said.

Federal and state workers joined local firefighters at hot spots across a 100-mile, four-county area from the coast west of Los Angeles to San Bernardino County.

Pepperdine University canceled classes Tuesday because the main artery through the area, Pacific Coast Highway, was closed to all but emergency traffic about 8 a.m. Two Malibu area elementary schools were also closed, and bus service for Santa Monica High School students was canceled.

Hot, dry desert winds had lowered the humidity to 10 percent, turning parched brushland into a firefighters' nightmare, and on Tuesday airplanes laden with fire-snuffing chemicals targeted two blazes roaring near Malibu.

The Santa Ana winds, which blew persistently Monday, died down Tuesday, said county fire inspector Mike Pearson.

"We had the fire burning right up to the walls of the (Malibu) sheriff's office" Tuesday morning, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Ronald Wallach. "It was like being within 100 yards of a napalm strike."

Officials said one man dropped dead of attack defending his home Monday in Box Canyon, about 30 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

In Piuma Canyon, a blaze burned an estimated 3,300 acres, destroying its sixth house and blackening the earth for two miles around the Malibu civic center, 30 miles west of downtown Los Angeles, Wallach said. The blaze was reported 30 percent contained Tuesday afternoon.

"We have a saying around here: They'll stop it at the kelp line," he quipped. "We haven't lost any beach yet."

A second fire that broke out in nearby Decker Canyon had burned across 5,800 acres, but no structures were threatened, said county fire Capt. Gordon Pearson. It had burned four houses and a garage Monday, but was reported 50 percent contained at noon.

Pearson is always suspected in fires like these," Pearson said, adding it was probably more than "a strange coincidence — three — fires started within 45 minutes in the same general area."

Eight air tankers began dumping chemicals just after dawn on the Piuma and Decker Canyon fires, as fire officials hoped to gain an upper hand. Pearson was cautiously optimistic Tuesday afternoon.

"We're starting to get some containment" he said, but no projections for control had been made.

In Wheeler Canyon, 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles and a few miles north of Santa Paula, six homes, two trailers and several outbuildings were destroyed by a 14,000-acre blaze that combined with another fire and raged untamed Tuesday, said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Kathy Good.

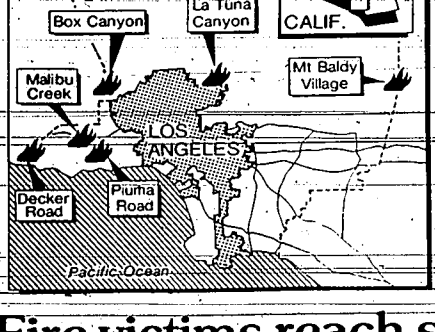

Ventura County fire spokeswoman Dana DeDiana said the department called in all available firefighters Monday as blazes erupted throughout the county.

That blaze, 30 miles northwest of Los Angeles, burned about 1,600 acres by Tuesday morning and was 99 percent contained. Box Canyon Road residents said at least one home there burned.

In Ventura County, two other fires estimated at more than 1,000 acres were reported out of control Tuesday afternoon, said Hank Weston of the California Department of Forestry. No structures were lost in either fire, but the Peachhill fire near Santa Rosa was threatening 200-300 homes and evacuations had been ordered, he said.

Another house and four sheds were destroyed on Mount Gleason in the Angeles National Forest, 25 miles north of downtown Los Angeles. About 500 acres had burned there, and the blaze was still out of control Tuesday afternoon.

National Weather Service meteorologist Frankie Shaw said winds were gusting up to 28 mph in some Southern California areas, compared with 50-mph Monday. The relative humidity was 10 percent or lower and temperatures were in the 80s.

Fire victims reach settlement

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Victims of a 1981 fire that killed eight people and injured 198 at the Las Vegas Hilton agreed Tuesday to a $22.8 million settlement from more than 40 defendants.

Attorneys gathered before District Judge Paul Goldman to sign final papers guaranteeing the payment, minus attorney fees, to 109 plaintiffs. Six other people, security guards at the resort, settled separately for a total of $50,000.

Attorney Neil Galatz, who represented most of the plaintiffs, said relatives of the eight people who died in the blaze will get the largest payments.

A fire started by a busboy in an eighth-floor lounge area sent flames shooting up the side of the 31-story resort in the early evening hours of Feb. 10, 1981. Most of those killed were felled by smoke inhalation in their rooms or in hallways of the massive hotel-casino.

The busboy, Philip Cline, was later convicted of eight counts of first-degree murder and is serving multiple life terms in the Nevada State Prison.

Galatz said the hotel will pay $16.5 million and the other defendants will split the remainder. Among the defendants were the hotel's architect, company's involved in its construction and firms that supplied the interior finishings and furniture.

Galatz said plaintiffs in the Hilton case will receive more money "on a per capita basis" than was paid out in a settlement to victims of the MGM Grand fire that killed 85 people only 2½ months before the Hilton blaze.

The MGM and other defendants settled in 1983 for $167 million on 1,357 claims. But disputes over insurance coverage of the payments continued until April when the MGM was awarded $76 million in payments from 63 insurance companies.

Hunger stamp goes on sale

The stamps go on sale nationwide Wednesday.

'Copter plunges into ocean, killing 15 Marines; 4 rescued

Officials said 15 Marines were killed and four rescued.

The twin-rotor CH-46D "Sea Knight" helicopter, flown by a crew of four, crashed in 50 feet of water about four miles off shore on takeoff from the USS Guadalcanal, said Gunnery Sgt. John Simmons.

One body was recovered shortly after the 6 a.m. accident and four survivors were plucked from the water near the carrier-like helicopter and troop ship, Simmons said.

Navy and Marine divers conducted a search and rescue operation in Onslow Bay much of the day for more survivors, but Simmons said the effort was called off in late afternoon and hope had been abandoned of finding anyone else alive.

Names of the dead were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The cause of the accident was under investigation.

It was the third-worst loss of life in a Marine aviation accident. On May 6, 17 Marines were killed when their CH-53D "Super Sea Stallion" helicopter crashed into the sea off southern Japan. Eighteen Marines and 11 South Korean Marines were killed when another Sea Stallion crashed into a South Korean mountain in March 1984.

The four survivors from Tuesday's crash were in good condition aboard the ship, said a Marine Corps statement read by Sgt. Pamela Vajner of the Camp Lejeune public affairs office.

On Tuesday afternoon the Guadalcanal sat in choppy water about 4 to 4½ miles offshore while several small boats circled at its stern, said Barry Thomas, a Jacksonville Daily News photographer who flew over the ship.

Simmons described the CH-46D AS "a very safe aircraft for us," and said, "It's real good. It's been in the inventory since Vietnam." He said he didn't have any statistics on the safety record of the helicopter.

The Marines were based at Camp Lejeune and its New River Air Station, said Staff Sgt. Terry Ruggles, also of the Camp Lejeune public affairs office.

The accident occurred not far from the Marine Corps' Onslow Beach, just east of Camps Geiger and Lejeune, where Marines practice beach landings, but the Marines said the ship's exact location was unknown.

The helicopter was assigned to Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 263 at Cherry Point, N.C. The CH-46 is the principal assault helicopter of the Marine Corps and also is used extensively by the Navy to carry cargo and passengers between ships and shore facilities.

U.S. reiterates clemency appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department reaffirmed Tuesday its opposition to South Africa's planned execution of Ben Moloise, who was convicted in the death of a black policeman.

Moloise, whose appeal for a new trial was denied by President P. W. Botha, is scheduled to be executed on Friday.

State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman noted that the United States supported a U.N. Security Council resolution in 1984 calling on South African authorities not to execute Moloise.

"Our position is well known to the South African government and has been repeated recently concerning our request for clemency," he said.

Air travel talks begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union opened talks Tuesday about resuming direct air travel between the two countries.

The aim is to reach an agreement before President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev hold a summit meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 19-20.

But a U.S. official involved in the negotiations said the outcome was not clear. "It's very hard to predict when you're going to reach an agreement with the Soviet Union, as it is with other foreign governments," he said.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said Pan Am, the American carrier, wanted to be sure it could compete "effectively with Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, for passengers.

He said U.S. negotiators were determined to see to it that Pan Am got a "fair shake." Pan Am is known to be interested in flying through the Soviet Union between Western Europe and India.

All Soviet landing rights in the United States were suspended by Reagan in 1981 as partial retaliation for Soviet "repression in Poland" and canceled in 1983 after the imposition of martial law in Poland.

There had been two flights a week between the two countries.

Officials charge 2 more Palestinians

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Investigators issued arrest warrants Tuesday for two more Palestinians, bringing to seven the number of people charged in the hijacking of the Achille Lauro during a Mediterranean cruise that began in this northern port Oct. 3.

U.S. Navy jet fighters intercepted an Egyptian airliner carrying them out of the country and forced it to land Friday at a NATO air base in Sicily.

Genoa prosecutors charged a 21-year-old Palestinian on Monday with conspiracy to hijack a ship and kidnapping. De Feo confirmed that the man was Kalaf Mohammed Zainab, who got off a Tunisian liner at Genoa with both an Iraqi and a Moroccan passport and has been in jail since Sept. 28.

Officials said investigators boarded the Achille Lauro on its voyage home from Port Said, northern entrance to the Suez Canal, outside which it was seized.

The news agency ANSA said magistrates Francesco Meloni and Luigi Carli of Genoa, along with Siracusa prosecutors Dolcino Favi and Roberto Pennisi, planned to question Capt. Gerardo de Rosa and crew members who might have witnessed the fate of Leon Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old American passenger the pirates are accused of murdering and throwing overboard.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Mohammed Abbas apparently had another brief brush over the weekend with the USS Saratoga, whose jets had forced him down in Sicily, but the PLO said the guerrilla leader had left Yugoslavia by Tuesday.

The near-encounter with the American aircraft carrier came in the Adriatic resort of Dubrovnik, after Italian authorities set Abbas free despite a U.S. request to hold him in connection with the hijacking of an Italian cruise liner last week.

The Saratoga made a delayed port call at Dubrovnik on Saturday, the day after its F-14 fighters forced an Egyptian jetliner carrying Abbas and the four hijackers of the Achille Lauro to land at a NATO base in Sicily.

Reports indicated that Abbas spent about an hour less than three miles from the ship, waiting at Dubrovnik airport for a connecting flight to Belgrade while the carrier was anchored offshore.

Abbas' Yugoslav Airlines plane flew directly over the Saratoga on its way from Dubrovnik to Belgrade. Soon after that, U.S. authorities were asking the Yugoslav government to arrest him.

The guerrilla chief, who helped negotiate the end of the hijacking, was hidden in Belgrade by the diplomatic mission of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The PLO said he left Yugoslavia on Monday, but did not give his destination.

Abbas, 38, said in an interview broadcast Tuesday in Italy that he "was only responsible for the mediation and freeing the ship," and had nothing to do with the hijacking.

The interview was obtained by TG1 radio and broadcast by RAI television, both of which are owned by the Italian government. Spokesmen for the radio station would not say where Abbas was at the time of the interview.

He challenged U.S. authorities to prove his involvement in the hijacking. "I am responsible only for the mediation and freeing of the ship," he said, "and this work I did in collaboration with the Egyptian authorities and on the request of Arafat. I was never on the hijacked ship."

Abbas said the hijackers had been told before they surrendered and left the Achille Lauro that they would be tried by Palestinians.

The Saratoga's port call had been scheduled a month earlier, but was delayed for nearly two days because of the intercept mission.

As Abbas left Dubrovnik, U.S. Ambassador John Scanlon and officers of the Saratoga were at a reception with Yugoslav military and government officials, according to U.S. diplomats; passengers on the Abbas flight and other sources who reported the coincidence.

U.S. diplomats declined official comment. One said privately that American officials in Dubrovnik could hardly have known Abbas was nearby, and even if they had there would have been no attempt to seize him.

Washed up body not yet identified

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Western diplomats said Tuesday they believed the decomposed body of an elderly man that washed ashore near the Syrian port of Tartus was that of Leon Klinghoffer, but final identification had not yet been made.

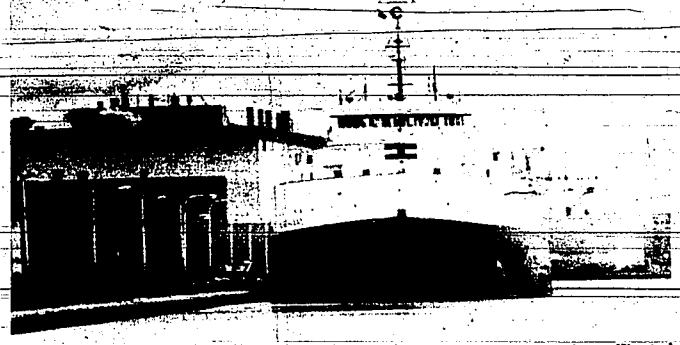

Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old American passenger confined to a wheelchair, was reported killed and thrown overboard by four Palestinian gunmen who hijacked the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro last week. The killing was said to have occurred Oct. 8 when the ship was off Tartus.

The hijackers, now in Italian custody, have denied they killed anyone during the two-day takeover, which began Oct. 7 off Port Said, Egypt, and ended two days later when the gunmen surrendered to Palestine Liberation Organization officials.

However, Lebanese radio monitors intercepted exchanges between the hijackers and Tartus port authorities on Oct. 8 in which a hijacker who called himself Omar was heard to say: "We have thrown him in the water. We have shot him once in the head. His wife is wailing. They did not identify the victim."

CBS reported Tuesday night that it had learned from unidentified sources that the body which washed ashore in Syria had a bullet wound to the head.

The body was found Monday near Tartus, 70 miles northwest of Damascus, and was brought to the Syrian capital Tuesday. Western diplomatic sources and a physician who saw the body said it appeared to have been in the sea for at least a week and had been severely disfigured by fish and the effects of the Mediterranean salt water.

Collapsed lock wall blocks St. Lawrence seaway traffic

THOROLD, Ontario (AP) — Ships carrying grain, steel and military equipment backed up Tuesday on the St. Lawrence Seaway, and one official predicted it would be weeks before a collapsed lock wall would be repaired and traffic allowed to resume.

"It's absolutely impossible to give an idea of the exact length of time," Seaway Authority President William A. O'Neil said about the repairs.

"We're not looking for a permanent repair," he said. "Our primary objective is to get navigation going. But I fully expect we will be open before the end of the shipping season."

John Adams, deputy chief engineer for the St. Lawrence Development Corp., the U.S. operator of the waterway, said about 55 ships were involved — 15 moored in Lake Ontario waiting to go west, seven in the Welland Canal, eight in Lake Erie and another 25 at other Great Lakes ports.

Adams said that number could increase as more ships steam into the system.

The Welland, which links the Atlantic Ocean, the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario with the rest of the Great Lakes, is scheduled to close for the winter at the end of December.

A 125-foot-long piece of a wall in Lock No. 7 of the canal dislodged Monday, trapping the Liberian freighter Furia for about eight hours. The Furia was headed from Milwaukee to Alexandria, Egypt, with 16,800 metric tons of grain aboard. No one was injured.

The Furia managed to back out of the lock Monday night after the chamber was filled with water to help support the weakened wall.

O'Neil said he would meet Wednesday with ship owners in Ottawa to discuss the damage and prospects of restoring shipping.

"We have as much interest in getting this thing back in service as quickly as possible as anybody else," O'Neil said. "We know what it means to the economy of the country — both the United States and Canada. We're well aware of what shipping schedules are. We know that there are critical dates that people have to meet."

Michael Pipia, commercial manager of Detroit's Fednav Lake Services Inc., said his shipping company had seven or eight ships tied up. Among the cargo, he said, is military equipment for the U.S. Army in Europe and steel for auto factories in Michigan and elsewhere in the Midwest.

Tiniest open heart surgery patient does well

LONDON (AP) — A baby girl, who at 15 inches was believed to be the smallest person ever to survive open heart surgery, is at home and doing well, a Brompton Hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

Surgeons wearing magnifying glasses opened the tiny chest of Sarah Floyd to repair a hole in her 2-inch-wide heart when she was three weeks old.

The spokesman said she weighed less than four pounds when the operation was performed six weeks ago.

She was born four weeks prematurely with severe heart defects and doctors mended a hole in her heart, repaired a valve and reconnected misrouted veins. "As far as we know, nowhere in the world has the operation been performed on a baby so small," said the spokesman, who in accordance with British practice declined to be identified by name.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A collision between a truck and a bus killed 12 people and injured nine at Bunder village near Cirebon, west Java, the official Antara News Agency reported Tuesday.

It quoted a police spokesman as saying that all those killed Monday night were aboard the truck, which was carrying 20 people. Passengers aboard the bus received slight injuries, the report said, adding that there was heavy rain at the time of the collision.

Roof collapses, killing at least 50 students

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The roof of a packed auditorium collapsed during heavy rain Tuesday night, killing at least 50 students and injuring more than 300, survivors and rescue officials reported.

Hundreds of tons of girders and cement crashed down on about 500 Dhaka University students who were watching a popular television program at about 9 p.m., during a heavy rain caused by a storm approaching the southern coast from the Bay of Bengal.

Students and officials at the scene said the toll could be much higher. They said the roof had been under repair.

The storm bore down on Bangladesh and southeastern India Tuesday night, with wind gusts reported at up to 93 miles an hour. Thousands of people were evacuated from offshore islands and coastal districts. Torrential rain and high seas lashed the region.

Many of those injured were in critical condition. State television appealed for blood donations, but many students who answered the call said hospitals were not able to handle the influx of donors.

Dhaka's three main civilian hospitals were packed with victims, brought in by ambulances or by fellow students carrying people on their backs because of a shortage of stretchers.

Rescue operations were hampered by the rain, lack of equipment and a lack of power in the ruined building.

The army brought in a large crane to help clear the rubble. Munirzzman Badal, president of university's student league, said many bodies still were buried.

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass said Tuesday that hundreds of families were left homeless by the weekend earthquake that rocked the central Asian republic of Tadzhikistan, but gave few details about deaths and damage.

"Hundreds of families who were left homeless have been moved to hotels, sanitoriums and schools," the official news agency said in a brief report from Dushanbe, the republic's capital.

"Tents are being raised in courtyards and hot meals are being organized," Tass said.

Tass earlier reported that the epicenter of Sunday night's quake was about 145 miles northeast of Dushanbe. It said factories, offices and homes were destroyed and there was "loss of life," but gave no details.

The Soviet Union often does not report fatalities in natural disasters, and the Tass report of loss of life in the quake could indicate heavy casualties.

FDR's death a mystery after 40 years

BOSTON (AP) — Was Franklin D. Roosevelt well when he sought an unprecedented fourth term as president?

Or did doctors who treated him in 1944 cover up a grave illness, perhaps a tumor or inoperable stomach cancer?

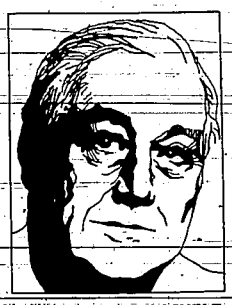

Answers to lingering questions about Roosevelt's health may lie in a memorandum at the center of a legal struggle that pits the confidentiality of medical records against posterity's claim to historical information.

Roosevelt died April 12, 1945, five months after he won re-election. His death was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage, but an autopsy was not performed.

One physician who pronounced Roosevelt's health good before he ran for re-election, the late Dr. Frank Lahey of the Lahey Clinic, afterward wrote a secret memo believed to contain information on FDR's health and now the Massachusetts Court of Appeals has been asked to decide who has legal custody of the document.

Medical historians have speculated that Lahey diagnosed Roosevelt as being very sick, perhaps with a tumor or inoperable stomach cancer, and even advised him not to run.

Before Lahey died in 1953, he entrusted the memo to Linda M. Strand, a personal friend and business manager at the clinic. He instructed that it be published only if he were posthumously criticized for his handling of his consultation with the president.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
Memo may solve puzzle

Mrs. Strand, now 89, turned the document over to her lawyers, the Boston firm of Herrick & Smith.

Dr. Harry S. Goldsmith, who has written about FDR's health, later sued on behalf of Mrs. Strand, seeking return of the memo, but the law firm won't let it go.

Lahey Clinic lawyer Edward B. Hanify argues its release would put the hospital in the position "of having the world say and having patients say, 'What protection do you give us?'"

Hanify added: "We realize the historical implications, and we are not trying to be obstructive to history."

He said the clinic wanted to make a "decision considerately and not from the sole view of an archivist who would like to have a find for his papers."

The historical implications are foremost, argues the National Archives and Record Administration, which has entered the case.

In a letter to the court, the agency said the memo "constitutes a unique source for reconstructing and understanding a statesman who dominated his era, and should shed considerable light on the role of the 'human factor' at a decisive stage in American history."

A Suffolk Superior Court judge ruled last January that there was insufficient evidence of criticism of Lahey to allow the memo to be returned to Mrs. Strand. She has appealed to the Massachusetts Appeals Court.

Goldsmith said in a deposition last year: "I personally think the president was dying the last year of his life from a tumor. I could be 100 percent wrong. But be that as it may, it (the memo) will set the record straight . . ."

Even if Mrs. Strand gets the document back, she does not know if she'll reveal its contents, she told The Boston Globe in a story published Monday.

Roosevelt's grandson, James Roosevelt Jr., is a lawyer at Herrick & Smith. He has not been involved in the dispute for ethical reasons but said he hopes the memo will be released.

"I believe the historical record should be as complete as possible," he told the Globe. "I would be very happy to see the court instruct my firm to preserve it and make it available to historians."

Skaggs sobs over choice as top act

By JOE EDWARDS
The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — "Country Boy" Ricky Skaggs, who dethroned Alabama as Country Music Association entertainer of the year, choked back sobs and said, "It's everything I've ever worked for all my life."

Skaggs, 31, won the coveted entertainer of the year award and a second honor as No. 1 instrumental group during the ceremony televised from the Grand Ole Opry House on Monday, two nights after it celebrated its 60th anniversary.

George Strait and the Judds joined Skaggs as double winners, but Alabama, the group that has dominated the top entertainer spot for an unprecedented three straight years, didn't pick up an award despite five nominations.

"It's everything I've ever worked for all my life," said Skaggs, who dropped out of high school his senior year and left his home in Louisa, Ky., to pursue his music career. "I began playing the mandolin at 5 and began singing at 3. I've worked for this and given up so many things to have my career."

He pulled a list out of his pocket as he accepted the award and read off a roll of people who had helped him get his start in country music, his voice cracking as he thanked his wife, children and parents.

Skaggs, a recording artist for only about four years, won with a boost from his acclaimed single, album and video "Country Boy." He also made a concert tour of Great Britain to perform the nine No. 1 hits he's piled up.

"The day I quit promotin' Ricky Skaggs, they'll have to put me in a padded cell somewhere," he said after the show.

Strait, an ex-foreman of a Texas cattle ranch, won male vocalist of the year and album of the year for "Does Fort Worth Ever Cross Your Mind."

"I'll never forget this night as long as I live," he said.

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo who have been singing professionally for two years, won single of the year for "Why Not Me" and No. 1 vocal group.

"I've never been so happy in my whole life," mother Naomi said.

Reba McEntire was voted female vocalist of the year for the second straight time and guitarist Chet Atkins won top instrumentalist for the eighth time and fifth straight year.

"I like to sing better than eat, Ms. McEntire said, then added, "No, that's not right."

Banjoist Earl Scruggs and the late guitarist Lester Flatt became the 43rd and 44th members of the Country Music Hall of Fame. They teamed from 1945 until 1969, recording such famous songs as "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" and the theme for the long-running television show, "The Beverly Hillbillies."

Other awards included Anne Murray and Dave Loggins, duo of the year; Hank Williams Jr., video of the year for "All My Rowdy Friends Are Coming Over Tonight;" Lee Greenwood, song of the year for "God Bless the USA," and Sawyer Brown, Horizon Award for career development.

Miss Murray and Kris Kristofferson were hosts of the show, which featured a segment honoring Willie Nelson for his songwriting career and efforts to help the nation's farmers.

Nelson received a plaque from Steve Meredith, national president of the Future Farmers of America, for arranging September's FarmAid concert in Illinois that raised money for financially ailing farmers.

The winners were chosen by the 7,500 singers, musicians, songwriters, disc jockeys and others who are professionals in the country music industry.

North Korea touts 2-volume book on 'Great Leader,' none available

NEW YORK (AP) — It's "the book you have been waiting for," a full-page ad in The New York Times proclaimed: two volumes on Kim Jong-il, "great hero, great leader" and heir apparent in North Korea.

But the wait isn't over. The book is not for sale in New York bookstores, and the North Korean mission to the United Nations refused to say where a copy could be had.

Nevertheless, observers say the full-page splash may signal a momentous shift within North Korea, ruled for 40 years by Kim Il-sung.

"It appears that Kim Il-sung is trying to inflate the image of his son as his successor," professor Donald Zagoria of Hunter College in New York said Tuesday.

Kim Il-Sung, 72, has built up a personal cult verging on a state religion. He is the first ruler of a Communist nation to attempt to pass on power to his son, who is 42.

Declaring that "Korea has given birth to one more great hero," the ad last week in the Times trumpeted: "Great leader, Kim Jong-il, the book you have been waiting for now on sale."

Volume 1 offered stirring chapter titles such as "Great Aspirations Beyond the Campus," "A Soaring Tower in the Flower Garden of Literature and Art" and "The Lodestar Has Risen." All in 308 pages, for $10, with volume II to follow in February.

The ad said the English-language book was published by Sorinsha in Japan.

"This book would put a lot of Americans to sleep," said Zagoria, a specialist on North Korea who ordered his copy direct from the capital of Pyongyang.

More than 1,000 books about Kim Il-sung and his son are said to be in the catalogue of Pyongyang's Grand People's Study House, a library.

However, this was the first U.S. promotion of a book on the younger Kim, and it was noteworthy that he was described as "great leader," a title heretofore reserved for Dad.

Previously, young Kim was always "the dear leader," American students of North Korea say.

Tadamasa Miyanishi, president of Sorinsha, said in Tokyo that his firm was asked by Chosensoren, a pro-Pyongyang organization of Korean residents in Japan, to publish the book.

Chosensoren bought 6,000 copies to be sold in the United States by mail, Miyanishi said. A Chosensoren official refused to talk about the book.

Another American expert, who insisted on anonymity to avoid offending his Korean contacts, said the ad probably was aimed at "domestic consumption."

Such ads are prominently displayed in a museum built to "glorify" Kim and his family, said this expert, who has visited Pyongyang several times.

"The ordinary North Koreans cannot differentiate paid advertisments from news reports," he explained. "Consequently, the ads in prestigious newspapers such as the New York Times are held up to them as though they were reports on their glorious leaders with pictures for all the Americans to read."

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

G: General Audiences, all ages admitted.

X: No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Station serenades Salt Lake City cathedral

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Heads were bowed for noon Mass at the Cathedral of the Madeleine when a disk jockey was heard on high.

The soft but unmistakable sounds of a commercial radio station somehow got in through the 1,100-seat cathedral's loudspeaker system, despite efforts to exorcise it, said the Rev. Francis Mannion.

"No, we haven't installed Muzak music," the priest told worshippers from the pulpit when the sounds disrupted Sunday's service. "This is coming from a new radio station in town and we've been trying for three days to get it out of our PA speakers. But now it's worse than ever."

Mannion proceeded to preach with no pauses to let the worldly serenade through, but smiling parishioners glanced upward at the source of the muffled piano and instrumental music.

Audio technicians, hired to investigate the problem said the signal was coming from KUTR, a new 50,000-watt AM station which has its transmitter five miles southwest of the church.

"We think it's being picked up by some fluke through the microphone cable near the altar rail," said engineer Clay Anderson. "It's been frustrating. We tried everything all day Saturday to get it out and nothing worked. I was ready to suggest beads and exorcism."

Station manager Richard Elliott said the errant signal also leaked through the public address system of a Mormon meeting house in Salt Lake City's Rose Park neighborhood during a funeral service.

Board orders driver rehired

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A trucking company must reinstate a driver who refused to make a week-long trip with a co-worker who smokes, an arbitrator has decided.

Arbitrator Martin Conway ruled that Monson Trucking, Inc., of Duluth, dismissed Edward Dunn of Bayfield, Wis., without just cause.

Dunn had said smoke irritates his eyes, causes him to be nauseous and gives him headaches — claims supported by a doctor's statement.

Dunn was discharged under a a contract provision that says an employee who refuses a load is considered to have resigned.

Conway said, however, that Dunn's discharge violated a contract between the company and the North Central Independent Drivers Union.

Union President William Talarico said this is the first time the smoking question has been raised in the company.

Laxalt to confer with Philippine leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A special envoy of President Reagan is in Manila for a meeting today with President Ferdinand Marcos to discuss the political situation in the Philippines, the growing communist insurgency and the future of American bases.

Sen. Paul Laxalt arrived Monday and some U.S. newspaper reports said he would deliver a strong warning to Marcos that the Marcos government is in danger of being overthrown.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters accompanying Reagan to Idaho on Tuesday that the reports were "overblown."

"The president (Reagan) wanted a close friend and longtime associate to go and visit a close, longtime ally to discuss with him the current state of affairs there and stress the continuing close relationship" between the two countries, Speakes said.

Tom Loranger, a Laxalt aide, said in Manila that a "private meeting" between the senator and Marcos was set for Wednesday. Loranger and U.S. Embassy spokesman Alan Croghan declined to specify the nature of the meeting.

"I'm not privileged to characterize the senator's meeting (with Marcos)," Loranger said when asked to comment on the published reports.

Loranger said Laxalt, a Nevada Republican, planned to return to Washington on Thursday.

A presidential palace source said he believed Laxalt was accompanied by Richard Childress, a director of the National Security Council for political and military matters. When asked about it, Loranger said he could not make any statement on who was in Laxalt's party.

Marcos has dominated the country for 20 years. Opposition to his regime has grown since the August 1983 assassination of Marcos' chief rival, Benigno Aquino. Marcos, 68, president since 1965, ruled for 10 years under martial law.

With stepped-up attacks by communist insurgents and with growing economic problems, the nation of 54 million people faces what some believe are its biggest crises since World War II.

U.S. officials have shown increasing concern over the communist rebellion.

Soviet units regroup

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Recent heavy fighting in eastern Afghanistan has died down in recent days as Soviet and Afghan government forces have pulled back and military activity is slackening with the approach of winter, Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The sources, who insisted on not being further identified, said fighting in the Paghman area to the north of the Afghan capital of Kabul and in Wardak and Loghar provinces to the south and west had tapered off. Soviet armored groups backed by helicopter gunships and jet fighter-bombers launched a series of attacks earlier this month to clear anti-Marxist rebel forces from the areas.

The communist government of Afghanistan is fighting Islamic rebels with the aid of an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops. Western correspondents are banned from Afghanistan and reports from inside the nation can rarely be confirmed.

Combat apparently still raged in Paghman up to Oct. 9 because wounded troops were brought to Kabul hospitals from that area, the sources said. One report from Paghman said a Soviet air strike in the area killed about 15 people in early October, they said.

Deng says Taiwan tie irritant

PEKING (AP) — The United States is not in a position to solve the Taiwan issue, Vice President George Bush said Tuesday after Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping told him U.S. support for Taiwan is the major irritant in relations.

Bush also said he raised unspecified human rights questions with the Chinese, explained President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative — commonly called "Star Wars" — and answered concerns over U.S. trade protectionism.

The vice president spoke at a news conference winding up three days of talks with Chinese leaders, in which he said the Nationalist-ruled island of Taiwan was frankly discussed as an obstacle.

Asked if Washington could support Peking's Taiwan reunification blueprint of "one country, two systems," Bush said: "I don't think that the United States is in a position to be the catalyst to solve this problem."

Government spokesman Ma Yuzhen quoted Deng, China's 81-year-old Communist leader, as telling Bush that Chinese-U.S. relations have progressed normally but some issues are unsettled.

"The principal question in our bilateral relations remains that of Taiwan. Once this question is resolved, Chinese-U.S. relations will develop smoothly without any obstacle in all fields," Deng was quoted as saying.

On his fourth return visit since he headed the U.S. Liaison Office in PPeking in 1974-1975, Bush said: "I like what I see. We still have fundamental differences ... with China, but we're finding more and more things in common."

Since his last trip in 1982, he said, he had noted more frankness in conversations and openness in Chinese society.

The Chinese spokesman quoted Deng as telling Bush, "It is true, there have been some changes, but the changes are not adequate."

The spokesman said Deng added: "If you come back in another three years, you will be able to see more substantial changes."

That would be 1988, a U.S. presidential election year. It is widely exected that Bush will seek the Republican nomination.

Deng spent much of the hour-plus meeting describing his economic reforms, which have reversed the egalitarian commune system of predecessor Mao Tse-tung.

Norwegian loses rights case bid

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — The European Commission of Human Rights ruled Tuesday that a Norwegian conscientious objector, who was jailed for refusing military or substitute civilian service, does not have a human rights case against his government.

The commission, whose ruling is final, gave no reason for its decision.

Jorgen Johansen, 29, a self-proclaimed pacifist, was sentenced to 16 months in jail for refusing either to serve in the military or perform substitute civilian service. He said the purpose of the alternative service "is to uphold respect" for the military establishment.

His jail sentence was the same length as that of the obligatory civilian service.

Defense, space negotiators meet

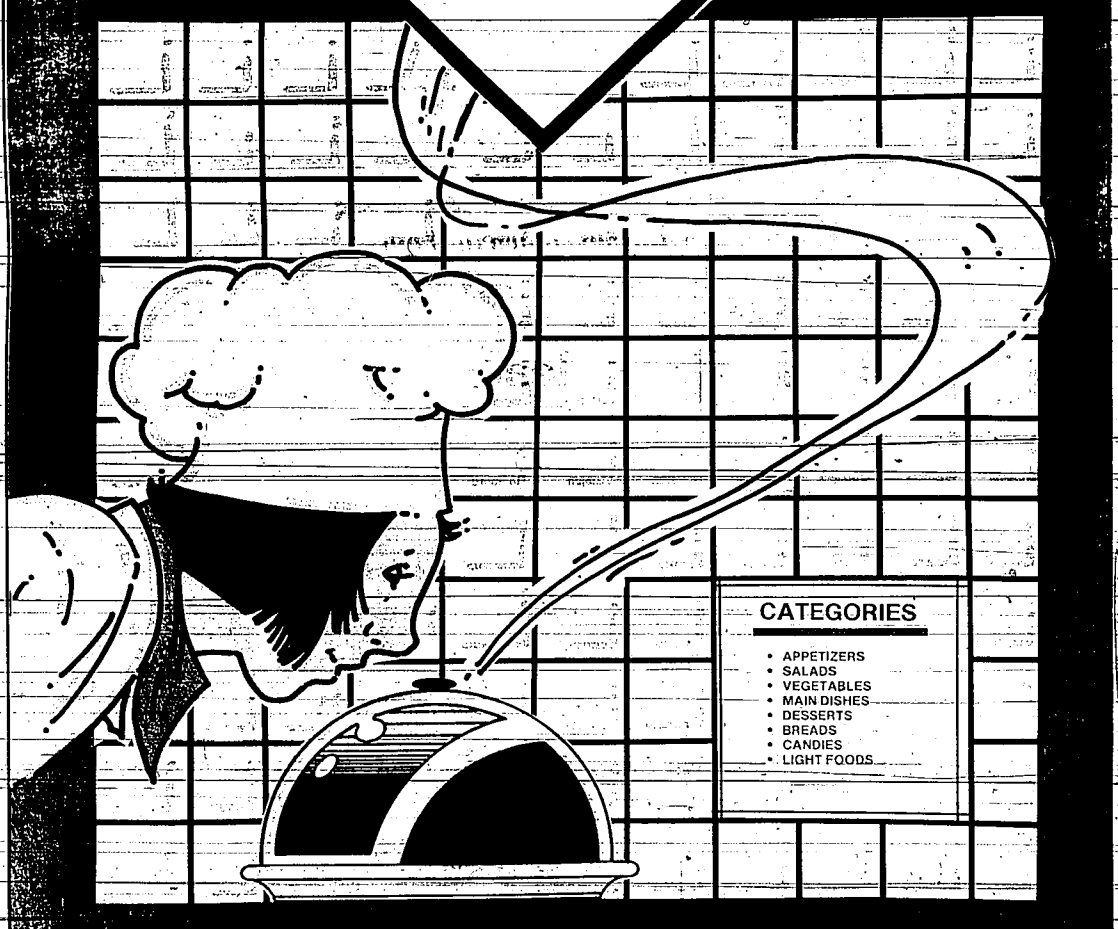

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators on defense and space met Tuesday for nearly four hours at the U.S. nuclear arms control offices, a U.S. statement said.

The statement did not give details, in keeping with the confidentiality rule agreed by the two sides at the start of the talks.

The session, between teams headed by Max M. Kampelman and Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, lasted three hours and 50 minutes, the statement said.

Fire code exception ignites heated dispute

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council voted at a Tuesday work session to give Stuart Morrison Tire Co. of Twin Falls a temporary break from meeting fire codes, after a heated discussion in which city staff members advised caution.

The council has already passed a resolution supporting the Uniform Building Code provisions allowing companies that are expanding to meet code requirements only on new additions. They do not need to improve fire safety conditions on the existing portion of their building.

Monday councilmembers Emery Petersen, Jack Miller and Erik Andersen voted to allow the tire company to build a 9,500-square-foot addition to its building, but to delay adding the fire doors that are required for the addition to meet safety requirements. Mary McClusky and John Peterson voted against granting an extension to the business. Doug Vollmer and Gale Kleinkopf did not attend the meeting.

City Manager Tom Courtney said a fire door was required by the code to separate the addition from an area of the building where recapping is done.

The business also has the option of adding fire doors to separate the recapping area from the rest of the building; in that case, fire doors would not be required on the addition, Courtney said.

Company officials have said that they cannot afford to pay for the $16,000 addition and the $4,000 fire doors, Petersen said. Unless an extension is allowed for the fire doors, the addition would not be built, he said.

"What we are doing here is retarding the economy," Petersen said. "We're retarding growth."

The fire doors are intended to protect people, but "these do not protect anyone," he said. Those who walk through the building will see that the fire doors are not needed, he said.

Courtney pointed out that fire codes are meant not only to protect the lives of employees in Twin Falls businesses, but also to protect firefighters who are sent into buildings to put out fires.

McClusky, who had toured the building, said she thought not adding the doors would endanger lives. "We have to stay with the code," she said.

She also questioned the business' estimates for installing fire doors. "First it's 3,000, then 4,000 and 5,000 for fire doors," she said. "Every minute it jumps."

The fire doors are required for both the good of the business owner and the city, she said. "We're to blame if anyone gets burned," McClusky said.

If the council does not require the building to conform to code — particularly after violations have been brought to the council's attention — the city might be partially liable in case of a fire, said City Attorney Shane Bengoechea. Twin Falls could lose its liability insurance next year, Courtney said.

"If the city is going to continue to run scared of liability . . ., downtown businesses might as well forget their liability (insurance) and let the city take care of liability," Miller said.

"There is such a thing as contingent

TFEA union numbers slide

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Teachers Association is not in jeopardy of losing its bargaining status with the School District, despite a loss of members this year, TFEA President Ray Grubbs said Tuesday.

Grubbs said the association went from 192 members last year to 157 members so far this year — a loss of 35 members. That means the association represents just half of the district's 315 teachers. The School District office recorded 131 members who signed up for the payroll deduction, which ended Sept. 30. But Grubbs said teachers do not have to sign up for payroll deduction of dues in order to join.

Boardmember Robert Knighton said Tuesday the board has not given "serious thought" to a certification election. In such an election, the TFEA would be recognized to represent teachers only if 51 percent of all of the district's teachers voted for it.

"We're aware that their numbers are down, but we really haven't discussed it, and I don't think the board is interested" in forcing an election, Knighton said.

During last year's lengthy and bitter contract negotiations, the Twin Falls School District did propose a contract provision calling for a certification election. Knighton said it was one of many proposals; and he was not sure if it made it in the final contract.

"If we really wanted to, I think we could call for an election," he said.

If the board did decide to force the issue, Grubbs said he was confident TFEA would win.

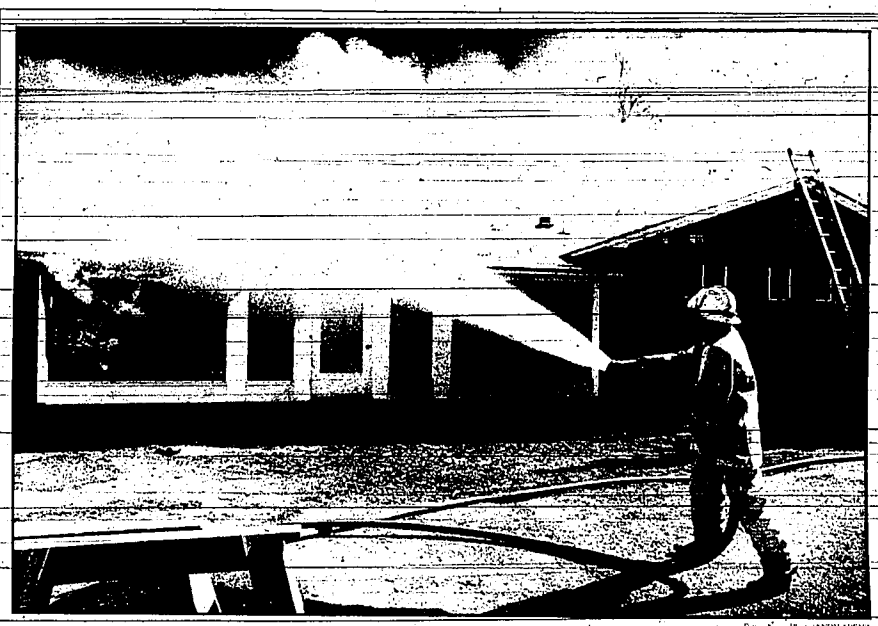

"It doesn't concern me in the least," said Grubbs, a Twin Falls High School science teacher who was elected TFEA president in May. "I know we have the support of a lot of non-members."

In June TFEA released a survey showing that of the 240 teachers who responded, 219 were pleased with TFEA and supported it in negotiations.

Why that support does not translate into members was a question posed to Terry Gilbert, Region IV director of the Idaho Education Association. Gilbert said the numbers reflected the current state of mind of teachers in general, and the conservative Twin Falls area in particular.

"Teachers have been put upon, maligned and paid lip-service to," Gilbert said. "Right now there's not a lot of self-esteem among the profession."

Burning down the house

In order to make room for a new clubhouse at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course, the Fire Department burned down the old one Tuesday as a drill for firefighters and a service to the city by saving demolition costs. Here, Battalion Chief Fred Webb sprays water on the roof of the old clubhouse to slow the fire down. Golfing went on as usual during the controlled burn.

Warehouse back on approved list

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — Curry Grain Storage near Twin Falls has become the 13th Idaho warehouse to regain permission to store grain for government reserves, after nearly two months off the approved list.

The U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Tuesday reinstated Curry Grain conditionally, said Trent Clark, agriculture aide to U.S. Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho.

The conditional permission allows Curry Grain and the other warehouses to handle grain for federal reserves while an audit of their records is being done.

The ASCS in August suspended the warehouses from the federal storage program. The federal agency accused them of shipping away and selling grain being held in government reserves, in some cases at a profit.

However, some warehouse owners acted after obtaining state permission. They said they thought the Idaho Bureau of Warehouse Control was giving them approval to move both private and government stocks.

The suspensions delayed some farmers from obtaining federal price support loans by depositing their wheat in the government reserve program at affected warehouses.

In order to help farmers and keep their business, Curry Grain had been accepting wheat and paying farmers at the federal loan rate until the suspension was lifted, said General Manager Jim Brennan.

Loot leads police on trail of other thefts

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies have traced a trailer-full of stolen goods to more thefts in Twin Falls County and possibly Elko County, Nev.

The cache of items, which included 18 weapons, were seized Thursday night from a rented trailer house located near Curry Crossing, west of Twin Falls. Three people were arrested at the trailer in connection with the theft of $180 Thursday morning from Shepard's Bar in Hollister.

According to Twin Falls County Chief Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen, the items seized from the trailer have been linked to seven thefts in Twin Falls County and possibly Elko County, Nev.

More charges will be filed on other thefts, he added. At this point, however, they have not determined which of the suspects arrested at the trailer will be charged with what theft.

"We're still putting this together," Jensen said Tuesday.

Elko County deputies will meet with Twin Falls County officers today to discuss the case, he added.

Elko County Sheriff's Cpl. Dale Lotspeich reported that he knew of no thefts in the Jackpot area that yet had been linked to the items confiscated from the trailer.

Jensen reported that the owners of the items, including the 18 weapons, have been identified.

"Everything has been accounted for. The victims came in and identified things they have lost," Jensen said.

Though Jensen refused specifics on the amount of items seized, he did say stereo equipment, clothing, canned goods and cash were among the items found in the trailer.

While the deputies continued their investigation Tuesday, 22-year-old Darryl Steve Inlow was charged in 5th District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls with stealing money from the Hollister Bar.

Inlow, of 242 Washington St. in Gooding, was arrested at the trailer, but he first was taken to Gooding County because of an outstanding warrant there on a burglary charge.

At the Tuesday hearing in Twin Falls, Inlow was appointed a public defender to represent him on the felony charge of grand theft. Magistrate Judge Mel Edwards set bond at $10,000.

Two other suspects arrested at the trailer, 20-year-old Frank Larry Isaacs and a 17-year-old girl, were charged last Friday in connection with the theft at the Hollister bar. Isaacs, of 420 Second Ave. W. in Twin Falls, faces a grand theft charge.

The girl, no address available, is accused of being an accessory.

The arrests were made after Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputies traced a vehicle spotted at the Hollister bar to the trailer, according to a complaint filed against Isaacs.

Another man, Franklyn A. Crow of Idaho Falls, was arrested at the trailer for allegedly firing a weapon while drunk.

Isaacs and Crow were being held in Twin Falls County Jail Tuesday, while Inlow is back in the Gooding County Jail.

Judge recovers after brain surgery

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Fifth District Judge Douglas D. Kramer is recovering in a New Orleans hospital after surgery to repair a ruptured blood vessel at the base of his brain.

The 60-year-old Kramer is in satisfactory condition following the delicate, four-hour surgery Tuesday, said Jim Bircher, Kramer's court reporter in Hailey.

The judge will be in intensive care for at least 48 hours recovering from the operation, Bircher said.

If all goes well, he said, the judge should return to his Blaine County home by the end of next week. He does not know, however, how long Kramer will be away from his duties as the administrative judge for Idaho's 5th Judicial District.

Bircher said Kramer was attending class on the first day of a judicial seminar in New Orleans when the blood vessel broke on Oct. 6.

The judge had severe headaches and took aspirins to counter the pain through Wednesday, Bircher said.

"I don't think he realized what had happened," Bircher said.

By Wednesday night, the pain became unbearable and Kramer was taken to a hospital in an ambulance at the insistence of his wife, Kathy, Bircher said.

Tests pinpointed the rupture, a Subbrachnoid hemorrhage, deep in the brain stem near the base of Kramer's brain, he said.

Kramer was told, however, that only two doctors in the world could operate in that area of the brain, Bircher said. Luckily, one of those doctors is based in New Orleans, he said.

Kramer was examined by Dr. Edward Conley at a hospital affiliated with Tulane University one week after the vessel ruptured. He was operated on two days later.

Bircher, who has been in regular contact with Kramer since the problem arose, said Conley told the judge that if he failed to have the operation the clot caused by the rupture would be absorbed within two months, and the vessel would rupture a second time.

County proposes employee group

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners has invited employees to form an employee committee, in an attempt to improve communications.

The impetus for the invitation was criticism from employees when the commissioners announced to news reporters a freeze on county wages in the 1985-86 budget before they informed the employees about it, Commissioner Judy Felton said.

The committee is an effort to improve communication between bosses and workers and more involve the employees in the total process of county government, according to a memorandum to employees from the county's elected officials, department supervisors and judges.

The employee committee will not be a grievance committee for specific personnel matters, Felton said. A grievance procedure for employees is outlined in the recently issued policy manual.

Employees will elect their own representatives to fill nine spots on the committee to represent the county's 120 workers. Committee members will schedule and conduct their own meetings. The commissioners, or other elected officials, will not attend unless invited.

The memorandum says: "Occasionally, we would like you to help us resolve issues that we have not been able to solve. Also, from time to time, we will want to present to your committee programs or changes in the affairs of the county to give you an opportunity for input before we make final decisions."

Any ideas, suggestions and criticisms from the committee will be passed on to the commissioners to be discussed at the regular meetings of county elected officials, department supervisors and judges, according to the County Board.

The commissioners have suggested that one member of the committee represent the various departments in the courthouse, such as prosecutor, weed bureau, sheriff's office, court and assessor.

Felton said the employees are under no pressure to form the committee.

Commission Chairman Ann Cover reported Tuesday that two people already were named to the committee. She refused to disclose the names until the full committee has been selected.

In reaction to the commissioners' offer to form the group, one employee, who wished not to be named, said it was nice the commissioners wanted to hear their suggestions. But she wondered what good the committee would do, since the County Board still has the final word.

Briefly

Warrants issued for stabbing

TWIN FALLS — Two warrants were issued late Tuesday in connection with the stabbing of an inmate in the Twin Falls County jail on Sunday.

The two were also inmates being held in the county jail cellblock at the time of the incident but have since been transferred to Jerome and Minidoka County jails. Twin Falls Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said Tuesday evening that the names of the suspects were not being released, pending serving of the warrants. Qualls said one is charged with aggravated battery and the other with an accessory to aggravated battery.h

Mike LeRoy Lapray, 30, of Buhl, suffered minor chest, face and head cuts about 4 p.m. Sunday when he was allegedly attack by the suspects while in the county cellblock. Officers said a weapon had been fashioned from metal parts of a squeeze mop. Lapray was treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released to his home.

Manslaughter charge reduced

Rick Gregg Oneida, 23, originally was charged with the felony for crossing the center line with his truck and fatally injuring 51-year-old Janet Verlee Ivy of Eagle Creek, Ore.

The accident occured on U.S. Highway 93, near Berger, when Oneida apparently did not see two vehicles stopped on the road, according to an Idaho State Police report. When he did see the vehicles, he swerved and went into the oncoming lane of traffic, colliding with a three-quarter-ton pickup truck driven by Ivy's husband, Sam.

A preliminary hearing on the felony charge had been scheduled Friday. But the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's office asked the court to reduce the charge against Oenida to vehicular manslaughter, a misdemeanor. Deputy Prosecutor Rockne Lammers said the reduced charge more accurately reflected the evidence in the case.

The request, however, had not been signed by a magistrate judge Friday afternoon and court was closed for the Columbus Day holiday Monday.

Stores, homes burglarized

TWIN FALLS — Two businesses and two homes were burglarized recently in Twin Falls, according to reports at the Twin Falls Police Department Tuesday.

Video West, 705 Blue Lakes Blvd., N., reported $2,400 in equipment taken sometime Monday afternoon or evening. Missing from the store were a portable VCR and camera valued at $1,400 and a portable VCR recorder valued at $1,000.

Elaine Drake reported several jewelry items, valued at $900, were taken from her home at 1250 Locust St. She said a broken window was found in a back bedroom of the home. A jewelry box containing assorted items was discovered missing. She said the theft probably occurred between 5 p.m. Oct. 11 and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Bill Hawkins reported someone entered his home at 1958 San La Rue Ave., and took a pistol and a knife valued at $275. The owner said he found his front door open and no sign of forced entry. The incident was reported Monday.

Man jailed on assault charge

HEYBURN — A 33-year-old Heyburn man was charged with assault with a deadly weapon Sunday night, after he allegedly threatened a juvenile boy with a gun.

Heyburn Police Chief Robert Vasquez said the juvenile was not injured. The incident occurred late Sunday, but he had not learned from his officers whether it occurred at a residence or elsewhere. The juvenile's parents contacted police, Vasquez said.

Minidoka County authorities said Mike N. Sellars, 33, was in the Minidoka County Jail late Monday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon. He was arrested by Heyburn city officers and bond was believed to be $10,000. The name of the juvenile involved was not released.

Radar detectors stolen

Police reports Monday showed radar detector equipment taken in three vehicle burglaries that occurred Friday night on parking lots along the boulevard.

Seth Nettleton of Boise told police his car was parked at the Sandpiper restaurant parking lot at 1309 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., about 7 p.m. When he returned to the vehicle, an Audi 5000S, he found a front window had been broken out and a radar detector valued at $350 was missing. He estimated the loss and damage to the vehicle at $700.

Jim Kern, Caldwell, reported his vehicle was broken into at the Holiday Inn parking lot, 1350 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., between 8 and 8:30 p.m. Friday. He said a radar detector was taken, resulting in a $395 loss and vehicle damage.

Willard Mark Wolf, Spokane, Wash., reported the theft of a radar detector from his car while it was parked at the Canyon Springs Inn lot Friday night. The radar unit was valued at $250, he said. Thieves also took a pair of boots and a collection of stereo tapes, bringing his total loss to $498.65, he said. The theft occurred between 11 and 11:15 p.m.

Betty Grant, Hailey, reported the loss of a stereo valued at $125. She said she had left her vehicle at the auto agency shop for repairs and when she went to pick it up, she discovered the stereo had been removed. The theft occurred Saturday, between 4 p.m. and 10:30 p.m., police reports showed.

Filer area of impact at issue in meeting

FILER — The Twin Falls County Commmissioners will hold a meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Filer City Hall to discuss Filer's area of impact with members of the Filer City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Last month Filer City Attorney Fred Decker recommended that the city and county officials should define an impact area in accordance with the state Local Planning Act of 1975 before the courts established it for them.

The state plan required cities to develop a comprehensive plan and identify an area of city impact by 1978. A comprehensive plan is a guide to land use and development within city limits and a surrounding impact area in the unincorporated part of the county.

Filer city officials delayed implementing the plan because of protests over the years from residents who would be affected by an impact area.

Heyburn may ease beer sale restrictions

HEYBURN (AP) — The controversy over Sunday sales of beer and wine in the Magic Valley continues to swirl as the city of Heyburn considers easing its restrictions even further, while the city of Paul is keeping the long-standing ban intact.

Amid some debate earlier this year, Heyburn followed the lead set by the city of Burley 10 months ago and lifted its ban on Sunday beer and wine sales but slapped a restriction on taverns and bars that confined sales from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Now local businessmen are complaining that the restriction is costing them at least a third of their customers, and they have gotten the ear of city councilmen for a proposal to extend Sunday hours to 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

"It's only fair to let the bar-owners have the Sunday business" as store operators do," said Councilwoman Bessie Hurless, although remaining opposed to any Sunday alcohol sales in the community. "They should both be allowed to make their living."

The council has directed City Attorney Steven Tuft to draft ordinances allowing the extended Sunday sales hours for enactment, possibly as soon as next month.

But in nearby Paul, the council has bucked the move to Sunday sales, rejecting a proposed ordinance to lift the ban.

"I have talked to a number of people and they are opposed to it," Ralph Walquist said. "I like Sundays that are nice and peaceful; and we do not want to change."

As in other communities of the Magic Valley over the past year, businessmen complained that they were losing weekend business to surrounding towns that have repealed the ban on Sunday sales. Paul Councilman Jim Brown says the city owned it to its merchants to lift the ban.

But others, including Police Chief C.K. Harkness, expressed concern about increased law enforcement problems, although none have been reported by other cities.

Dollarhide house will be moved Thursday

KETCHUM — The historic house that received a temporary reprieve from a burning last week will be moved to a city-owned lot in Ketchum Thursday morning.

The Dollarhide house, built in 1883, will be placed on an empty lot at the south end of East Avenue in the downtown business district for the winter while the Valley Artists Guild works out an ownership and restoration plan to save it.

After trying for three years to save the house, owner John Daley of Ketchum wants to donate it to the guild or the city to assure its preservation. Daley, whose family has owned the house since 1916, had decided to burn the house before the guild offered to use it.

The guild has created a "Save the Dollarhide House" fund to raise money for the move, to build a permanent foundation for the house and its restoration.

Preliminary plans call for the house to be used as a cooperative gallery for the guild's members and possibly as a museum or public gathering place.

Lyn Stallard, who is leading the guild's effort to save the house, says the guild plans some activities to go along with the move.

Last week, the Ketchum City Council allowed the house to be moved to the East Avenue lot for the winter and gave the guild until Aug. 1, 1986, to put together a plan for ownership and restoration for the house. The city did not commit to accept the house or make the lot a permanent site.

liability, Jack, and don't you forget it," John Peterson responded.

To the mayor, he said, "Why not repeal the code and use our own judgment? That's what we're doing now."

He said he was in favor of allowing an extension, but that he doubted the council had the legal authority to do it. "I think we should live by the code or not," he said.

Miller said the code stated that its rules were to be applied with discretion.

But Bengoechea said the code specified that the building inspector, not the council, was the one to use discretion in applying the code.

"We're saying the building inspector should work with them," Petersen said. The building inspector would decide how long the tire company could delay installing fire doors, he said.

No building inspectors or fire officials attended the meeting.

Petersen said all he wanted to do was to give the business an extension before requiring fire doors be installed. He said the city routinely grants deferral agreements that allow homeowners to delay installing sidewalks, curbs and gutters.

In another matter Tuesday, McClusky suggested that representatives from the men's and women's golf associations be allowed to attend council committee meetings on the proposed golf course clubhouse. The committee will be considering some plans suggested by the contracter, Armstrong and Co., such as pouring footings now for a mezzanine that may be needed in the future.

McClusky said the two golfers would "just sit in," not make a decision. There has been dissension between the council and some golfers, who believe the council is not giving enough consideration to the wishes of the golfers.

No councilmembers spoke in support of McClusky's proposal. Because council committees are composed of less than half the members of the council, the law does not require that they be open to the public.

Gilbert said for a teachers association to maintain members, "There must be a sense of loyalty to the idea that teachers are professionals," and also that "their world does not begin and end in the classroom."

As for Twin Falls teachers, Gilbert said he's heard complaints from both sides: either TFEA was "too militant" during negotiations last year, or "they didn't do enough."

"Some teachers said that until TFEA gets more muscle, they're not going to join," Gilbert said.

Grubbs said TFEA members will be going from school to school this year, asking teachers why they didn't join and answering questions about the TFEA.

Envirosafe application claimed faulty

MURPHY (AP) — Owyhee County has issued a report contending that the Envirosafe Services application for an operating permit is riddled with inaccuracies.

But an Envirosafe spokesman says "that's a bunch of bull."

A 28-page report on Envirosafe's permit application, compiled by Owyhee County Prosecutor Clayton Andersen and county Environmental Safety Officer Charles Scott, was sent to the federal Environmental Protection Agency on Oct. 7. The EPA would issue the permit.

Envirosafe's dump near Grand View is operating under a temporary permit. The company has applied for a 10-year renewable operating permit. Public hearings on the permit application were expected to be held in January, but officials now say they could be delayed.

The county's report stated that Envirosafe's "application is filled with errors, falsehoods and omissions, both as to facts and conclusions."

Envirosafe Vice-President Larry Haack said the report "is a bunch of bull. (County officials are) pulling out minor inconsistencies from the report and making a big deal out of it."

"In a document as massive as (the application), there will always be minor inconsistencies," Haack said. "There's no way we can make it perfect."

The permit application consists of several volumes that would stand about 5 feet high if piled together, he said.

EPA and state Division of Environment officials could not be reached for comment Monday because their offices were closed for Columbus Day.

The county's report made several charges against Envirosafe, including that the company did not sample all its groundwater-monitoring wells monthly, as required by the EPA; that it falsified water testing information; and that it did not include the location of certain monitoring wells on a map of the dump site.

Haack denied most of the charges and said that the county "is just blow ing a bunch of smoke in some areas of the report." But, he said, the report did have some valid points that would be looked into by the company's contract engineering firm, including the charge that monitoring wells were left off a map included in the application.

Mel Morgan suffers 'mild' heart attack

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho Democratic Party Chairman Mel Morgan suffered an apparent mild heart attack and remained in intensive care at a Pocatello hospital Tuesday, his wife said.

Jan Morgan said Tuesday that her husband would remain in the intensive-care unit at Bannock Regional Medical Center "for four or five days to make sure there are no complications. But he's stable, and I think it was a mild one (heart attack)."

Morgan was admitted to the hospital at 5:30 a.m. Monday complaining of chest pains, a hospital spokesman said. Mrs. Morgan said doctors hoped he could leave the hospital in about 10 days.

Morgan, 67, a retired jeweler, suffered another heart attack about 20 years ago, his wife said.

"It wasn't terribly severe, but it's like any heart attack," she said. "The doctor says it's like being bitten by a rattlesnake — you can have a smaller hole or a bigger hole, but you've still been bitten by a rattlesnake."

Mrs. Morgan said her husband's health has been reasonably good since the first heart attack, but that he had been forced to give up an exercise program because of a bad back. Doctors recently told him to lose some weight, she said.

Morgan had just returned home from Sun Valley where he attended the Western Democratic caucus.

Attorney: Insurance suit likely to be dropped

BOISE (AP) — A class-action lawsuit seeking continued liability coverage for Idaho public entities from Colonial Penn Insurance Co. probably will be dropped, Deputy Attorney General Scott Wolfley said.

Wolfley said the suit will be dropped because the Philadelphia-based company has agreed to extend insurance coverage until the end of the year. The action was filed on behalf of more than 90 government bodies whose liability insurance would have expired by Dec. 31.

Stephen G. Larsen, Bannock County's chief deputy prosecutor, who filed the class-action suit, was expected to move for dismissal of the lawsuit Tuesday, Wolfley said. Larsen could not be reached for comment Monday because of the Columbus Day holiday.

The suit had sought a court-ordered extension of the policies, $50 million in damages and $50,000 in attorneys' fees from Colonial Penn.

Wolfley said Colonial Penn — Idaho's largest government-liability insurer — agreed to extend its $500,000 comprehensive liability policies for each entity. The policies provide insurance coverage of $500,000 per occurrence.

According to Colonial Penn, the average premium increase statewide will be about 40 percent for a package, including general liability, auto and property insurance, Wolfley said.

He said other terms of the agreement with Colonial Penn includes a two-week period during which municipalities can choose whether to accept or reject the coverage proposed by the insurer.

Wolfley said two Idaho cities, Preston and Heyburn, also individually filed lawsuits against Colonial Penn to extend their liability insurance coverage. He said both of those cities also are expected to drop their suits within the next few days.

Wolfley said all three lawsuits included temporary restraining orders that forced the company to continue liability insurance coverage. He said those also are expected to be dropped.

Meanwhile, Wolfley said, "The major focus now is finding new carriers for these people by January." He said Idaho's Department of Insurance is working to find those insurers.

Drinking age debated

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — Bar and restaurant owners have urged an Idaho legislative committee not to raise the state's drinking age from 19 to 21.

Lounge and hotel proprietors also predicted that an age boost would cause job and tax revenue losses throughout the state's economy.

States that fail to raise their drinking ages to 21 by October 1986 will lose a portion of their federal highway funds under a 1984 law passed by Congress. Idaho stands to lose more than $13 million in 1986 and 1987 if the drinking age remains at 19.

Sen. Atwell Parry, R-Melba, on Monday echoed a sentiment heard often when that measure was under consideration.

"I will oppose that because I absolutely oppose federal blackmail," said Parry, co-chairman of an ad hoc legislative committee reviewing the state's liquor laws.

Jerry Jaeger, president of Hagadone Hospitality Co., said he believes the revenue lost from increasing the drinking age would exceed the loss of federal highway money.

The drinking-age question actually is beyond the scope of the committee's inquiries.

Idaho migrant worker law suggested

BOISE (AP) — Oregon's labor commissioner says Idaho should consider a farm law that would protect migrant workers from unscrupulous labor contractors.

Oregon law requires labor contractors to post a cash bond used to help migrant workers if their bosses disappear without paying them, Commissioner Mary Roberts said.

In a meeting with Gary Gould, director of the Idaho Department of Labor and Industrial Services, Ms. Roberts said Oregon labor contractors sometimes move to Idaho and other states without such laws to avoid paying their workers.

The Oregon law requires labor contractors to post a $5,000 bond for each contract signed with a farmer. Sometimes contractors find it cheaper to forfeit the bond.

Gould said Idaho legislators might be interested in such a law because it would protect farmers as well as workers.

Spud week for students questioned

ABERDEEN (AP) — Citing a loss of attendance-based state funding, school officials in Aberdeen are questioning the traditional practice of allowing students a week-long vacation during potato harvest.

Absences cost the district $4 a day per student in state funding, Superintendent Ron Cummings said. During spud harvest, that could add up to as much as $1,772 for the week.

Trustee Ray Funk said some students also remain in the fields during the week after harvest vacation, costing the district even more.

"Let's cancel spud harvest," Funk said. "Educating our kids is more important than the kids working."

Besides funding problems, absences before or after the vacation make it difficult for students to meet the state's 90-percent attendance rule, high school Principal Wendell Anderson said.

Man killed by dynamite

EASTPORT (AP) — A Bonners Ferry man was killed Monday after dynamite charges he was setting in a test mine detonated prematurely, Boundary County sheriff's deputies reported Tuesday.

Killed in the blast was Guy W. Patchen, 78.

Patchen and a partner, whose name was not immediately available, were working on the mine, a test hold for gold deposits, in the Robinson Lake area, deputies said. Five dynamite charges had been set, and Pathen was on his way out of the mine when one charge exploded, then another, exploded behind him, authorities said.

The victim was about 15 feet inside the shaft, which is about 20 feet deep and ran in and slightly down into a hillside, Smith said.

Smith said the mine will be sealed until officials can remove or detonate the remaining three charges.

Court grants judge Canyon land title

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has unanimously upheld 3rd District Judge Jim Doolittle's decision in a land ownership lawsuit.

Doolittle ruled in favor of Larry and Marilyn Ralls in a dispute over the ownership of Canyon County pasture land. Ileda Fouraker appealed, contending she should receive title to the land through a bankruptcy transaction involving her son, Gerald Fouraker.

The court rejected an argument by the Fourakers that the bankruptcy proceeding should result in Mrs. Fouraker receiving title to the land.

Psychologist mom allergic to her son

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Here's a problem I'm sure you have never had before. I am allergic to my son. Howard is an intelligent, good-looking senior in college.

He and I have never had a very good relationship because our philosophies differ. I am an optimist who is willing to take responsibility for my actions.

Howard is a pessimist who blames others for his problems. When he is around, his negative gloom-and-doom attitude irritates me and I break out in hives. I know that he is the cause of my hives because they disappear when he goes back to college. (This has been happening for four years.)

He will graduate soon, and plans to come back home to live. The thought of it makes me literally ill.

Don't tell me to see a counselor. I'm a psychologist, and know all the book answers. Howard tried two counselors, but he insisted he didn't have a problem even after both counselors identified the problem, so now what do we do?

— MOM

DEAR MOM: You may know all the book answers, but the doctor who treats himself has a fool for a patient.

If you let Howard come home, knowing he makes you sick, you need to see a psychiatrist about your masochistic behavior. Howard also needs help, but not as much as you. He gives hives, you get them. So, I advise you to scratch Howard, not hives.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old divorced woman with two children from a previous marriage. For the last nine years, I have been living with a man I love very much. He's 46 and says he loves me. Last year we purchased a beautiful house in both our names.

My problem is that he has asked me not to work for the last nine years because he wants me "at home." He's an excellent provider, and we lack for nothing. He has told me that I am the beneficiary on all his insurance policies, and I am the main beneficiary in his will.

My concern is his 22-year-old daughter from a previous marriage. What are my legal rights if she contests the will? Could I lose my inheritance fighting the daughter for what is rightfully mine? If he left her a token inheritance, could she still protest?

I love him very much and don't want to leave him, but I need to know that my future will be secure. We've been arguing about this lately because he thinks I'm trying to pressure him into marriage. I would love to be married to him, but could continue to live as we are, as long as I knew his daughter wouldn't take from me what he and I have put together.

Please answer in your column, as I'm sure other women have these questions.

— NEEDS SECURITY

DEAR NEEDS: Much will depend on whether you are living in a state that recognizes common-law marriage. Please see a lawyer.

If your gentleman friend is on the level, he will not object to showing you the documentation (will and insurance policy) you need to feel secure. You have every right to know.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Medicare reforms hit elderly with higher costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reforms in Medicare that were intended to control medical inflation — successfully, the Reagan administration says — are having the unintended effect of sharply boosting the amount old people will pay out of their pockets for hospital care next year.

The $1.1 billion increase taking effect Jan. 1 will affect every Medicare recipient admitted to a hospital after that date. It will cost each of them an extra $92 per hospital stay, on top of the $400 they pay now.

The increase also covers higher fees for people hospitalized for more than 60 days and for people in skilled-nursing homes. All told, an estimated 8 million people will be hit with higher fees.

The change in the Medicare hospitalization deductible payment was ordered by the Department of Health and Human Services under a law intended to adjust the payment level to reflect rising hospital costs.

The administration says it had no choice under that law but to order the increase.

"The secretary has no discretion in computing the inpatient hospital deductible and co-insurance amounts," the administration said in its notice of the increase.

But it also concedes that more than half of the increase has nothing to do with rising hospital costs, but instead reflects shorter hospital stays fostered by government payment policies.

The shorter hospital stays have had the effect of boosting the average daily cost far beyond overall cost increases. And the formula the government is required to follow is based on average daily costs, not overall costs.

Jack Christy, a lobbyist for the American Association of Retired Persons, says the change is going to mean tighter budgets for elderly pensioners who can scrape together the extra money — and less medical care for those who can't.

"We're seeing, or we will see, tremendous access problems," Christy said. "Many people can barely afford $400; it's going to be very difficult for them to afford $492. Certainly it's time to re-evaluate the formula."

The change was imposed in a brief notice Sept. 30 that received little public notice and has evoked little public response.

Police think Salt Lake City bombings linked

By PEG McENTEE
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A downtown office building and a suburban Salt Lake City home were rocked by explosions Tuesday, killing two people in what authorities said were related bomb blasts.

"This was definitely a professional-type hit against an individual target," said Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward. "It was a very sophisticated-type weapon."

The explosions, three hours apart and both triggered by motion, sent bomb squads searching through the homes and businesses of acquaintances of the victims for other explosives.

Katherine Sheets, the 50-year-old victim of the second blast at 11:21 a.m. MDT, stepped out of her house, walked outside and picked up a newspaper that was resting on a box, which then exploded, Hayward said.

"We feel there is a definite connection between the city's (explosion) and what happened here today" at the residence, he said, adding that the bomb at the home was thought to be intended for the victim's husband, J. Gary Sheets, because his name was on it.

Steven F. Christensen, 31, a stockbroker who had just arrived at his sixth-floor office in the downtown Judge Building, was killed when a box bearing his name and lying in a corridor exploded, killing him instantly.

Police Chief Bud Willoughby said investigators were pursuing two possible motives for what could have been the work of a paid assassin. One centers on the former business relationship between Christensen and Sheets, the other on Christensen's involvement with controversial documents relating to the origins of the Mormon Church.

"All the players are involved in both," he said. "We are leaning toward the business transactions," but he said it was doubtful the case involved either a disgruntled partner or past or present employee.

"Somebody is very, very upset," Willoughby said.

Hayward said a witness at the building early Tuesday saw someone in an elevator who was carrying a box addressed to Christensen. He refused to say if the person was a man or woman.

Authorities put together a composite drawing based on what the witness saw, but did not immediately release it to the media.

Christensen was an associate of Sheets' at Coordinated Financial Services until about six weeks ago, when Christensen moved into the Judge Building and opened a new business, Willoughby said.

He refused to comment on reports that CFS, for which Sheets is chairman, was in financial difficulty. However, he said, "financial dealings are spider-web effects."

He said a task force of more than 30 members and coordinated by the sheriff's office had been formed to investigate the explosions. Investigators from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were assisting and the FBI was providing laboratory help.

The first bomb was believed placed at the Judge Building at about 5 a.m. Tuesday; the other after 5:30 or 6 a.m., he said.

"The distance apart (about 10 miles) probably indicates two people were involved, but that's speculation on my part," the police chief said.

The first bomb contained "shrapnel," including cement nails and other materials, said police Lt. Bill Gray.

A witness, Mary Olpin, who works at Jamco Co. on the sixth floor, said she saw a box at the door to Christensen's office, with his name on it, and the victim apparently picked up the box.

"It looked like he had it in his arms. He took the full impact," Ms. Olpin said. "It was so loud when it went off. The whole building shook."

She described Christensen as "nice, friendly. He was new in the building."

About an hour after the blast, a bomb-detecting dog was brought out to sniff the victim's vehicle, a Jeep parked directly in front of the building.

Hayward said the bomb at the residence was in a cardboard box at the corner of the garage with a man's name written on the outside. The victim had walked from her house to the garage to get into her car.

"It appears she was leaving the house and picked it up on the way out," Hayward said. The woman's identity was being withheld and police refused to divulge the name on the box.

Brent Metcalfe, a former Christensen employee and Mormon historian, said Christensen was the collector who purchased the controversial "Salamander Letter."

The letter is believed to have been written by Martin Harris, a close confidant of Mormon Church founder Joseph Smith. The document gives an account of Smith's efforts to obtain the gold plates from which he said he translated the "Book of Mormon," a volume of Mormon scripture.

However, the account differs from official church histories, implying Smith used folk magic in acquiring the plates. It says an "old spirit" transfigured from a white salamander at first prevented Smith from obtaining the plates.

"I worked for him about a year and a half. He was an extremely close friend," Metcalfe said. "I just can't even conceive of that. Steve was one of the most loving, Christian people I have ever known."

Kelly Measells, an insurance salesman on the seventh floor of the Judge Building, said he arrived at 6:30 a.m. and the door of the building was "wide open."

"Usually the office is locked up like a drum. You need a push code to get in. This time the door was wide open," said Measells, who did not see anyone else in the building, which is usually locked at least until 7 a.m.

Ex-agent vulnerable, prosecutor declares

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former FBI agent charged with espionage was sexually and financially vulnerable to recruitment by the Soviet Union, a prosecutor told the jury Tuesday during closing arguments.

Richard W. Miller, 38, the only FBI agent ever charged with espionage, was arrested Oct. 2, 1984, on charges of furnishing classified information to Soviet agents for $65,000 in cash and gold.

"The government submits the evidence in this case establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt as to each and every one of the seven counts in the indictment," Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Hayman said.

Co-defendants Svetlana and Nikolay Ogorodnikov already have pleaded guilty and were sentenced to prison for conspiring to commit espionage.

Hayman was the first prosecutor to speak Tuesday in the two-part government closing argument, which will be concluded after the defense summation. The trial began Aug. 6.

Hayman told the jury that two key issues it must decide are whether Miller's lover, Mrs. Ogorodnikov, was a Soviet agent and if Miller was vulnerable to recruitment by the KGB, the Soviet secret police and intelligence service.

"There's no question whatsoever that there was a conspiracy in this case," Hayman said, reciting a list of evidence presented to support the contention that Mrs. Ogorodnikov was working with Soviet officials to lure Miller into spying.

The defense contends that Miller, his job performance marred by weight problems, sloppiness and incompetence, was attempting to salvage his FBI career through a maverick infiltration of the Soviet spy network.

But Hayman said those problems, along with financial difficulties and a penchant for extramarital affairs, were why Miller was ripe for recruitment in summer 1984.

"He was financially vulnerable to recruitment," Hayman said.

"All the evidence is he needed money, and he took lots of actions to try to get that money," he said.

Hayman cited Miller's credit card balances to show Miller was borrowing money. He told jurors that Miller was behind in mortgage and tax payments and that he was considering selling his avocado ranch in San Diego County.

"He was also sexually vulnerable to compromise by the KGB," Hayman told the jury. "He had problems with his wife. . . . He was sexually promiscuous. In February 1984 he was excommunicated by his church for adultery."

Miller was a member of the Mormon church.

He reminded the jury that Miller had been quoted as telling FBI agents that "sex was an important part of his relationship with Svetlana Ogorodnikov."

Before the arguments began, U.S. District Judge David Kenyon dismissed a juror and an alternate who asked to leave the jury because of personal schedule problems exacerbated by the length of the trial.

Kerrey mum on future

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Gov. Bob Kerrey said Tuesday he would not seek a second term as the state's chief executive, but he refused to discuss his future in politics or with actress Debra Winger.

"I think I have consciously put those things out of my mind while I worked this (the re-election decision) out," Kerrey, a Democrat, said in an interview following a news conference announcing his decision.

All Kerrey said about his future was: "I need to find a little danger." He did not elaborate.

Kerrey, 42, said he was "still enjoying the job" as governor, but would not say why he decided to leave it.

"I don't think the disappointments of the job or the frustrations had anything to do with my deciding not to run; I can't know that for sure, but I don't think it did," he said.

He often had said his re-election decision would hinge in part on whether he enjoyed the work and if he was good at it.

Kerrey said he felt he was good at the job, but added, "there have been some clear mistakes and hopefully they contributed to making fewer mistakes."

For meddling in election

Women rebuke Utah politicians

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A group of women Chamber of Commerce members, furious over partisan overtones in last week's mayoral election, have rebuked Gov. Norm Bangerter and other GOP officials for taking sides in the race.

The Provo chamber's Civic Improvement Division, made up of about 50 professional women, said in a letter to Bangerter, Rep. Howard Nielson and Sens. Orrin Hatch and Jake Garn that the party should have kept out of the non-partisan contest.

"How strongly must we stress this is not a partisan race?" said the letter signed by division chairwoman Kathi Golightley. "Provo's government runs well under the current system, and no vote has been taken by the City Council to change the status of Provo's government or elections."

The group, acting independently of the full chamber, sent copies of the letter to Utah County Republican Chairman Steve Shallenberger and the two candidates, Joseph Jenkins and incumbent James Ferguson.

Jenkins, a Republican member of the state House of Representatives, received more than 60 percent of the vote Oct. 8, leading the two-term mayor by nearly a two-to-one margin. He and Ferguson will face off in the Nov. 5 municipal election.

The letter was a response to Shallenberger's "Dear fellow Republican" campaign letter and to endorsements of Jenkins by Bangerter and Nielson.

"What right do you and your staffs have to come into our small-town politics and try to throw the race through partisan power?" the chamber group wrote. "We are disappointed with the action taken by our state and national leaders and suggest an immediate reappraisal of the action taken in the Provo mayoral campaign."

Shallenberger said his letter was intended as a personal gesture of support for Jenkins and was sent only to selected Republicans in Provo.

"The Republican Party does have a preference in the race and we don't mind people knowing what it is," he said.

Jenkins said he received a small amount of financial support from the GOP, but maintained partisanship in the campaign was low-key. He claimed Ferguson was the one who had brought politics into the picture by running for lieutenant governor last year as a Democrat.

But Mrs. Golightley said the letter opposing party involvement in the mayoral race was agreed upon by both Republican and Democratic chamber members.

"I consider myself leaning more toward Republicans than Democrats," she said. "It's just the fact that they're going against what this election should be, and that's non-partisan."

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A four-block area in the Spokane Valley was cordoned off early Tuesday after the driver of a vehicle carrying low-level nuclear wastes discovered a liquid dripping from the truck during a coffee break, authorities said.

However, investigators later found that the water was not radioactive.

The truck driver, Robert Aiken, said he stopped for coffee at the truck stop.

"Every two hours we have to give a DOT (Department of Transportation) check ourselves, a physical eye check, and I see water coming out of the trailer. That's a no-no," Aiken said.

He said he immediately contacted a sheriff's deputy who was in the area.

Steve Barstad, a dispatcher for the Spokane Valley Fire Department, said specialists from the state Department of Ecology checked out the truck and the liquid and found no radiation beyond normal background levels.

Larry Shucker, another fire department dispatcher, said the materials were in solid form. Asked how liquid could be dripping from any of the 20 55-gallon drums, or eight large steel boxes, Shucker said one of the containers may have had a hole in it and was rained on somewhere along the way.

AP Laserphoto

Liquid leaking from this truck in Spokane sparked a nuclear waste scare

"It was a large drip to start, but has slowed down now," he said.

The truck was en route to the state's low-level nuclear waste disposal facility on the Hanford nuclear reservation from Commonwealth Edison's Dresden nuclear generating plant, about 60 miles south of Chicago, company spokesman John Hogan said.

The drums and boxes contained various items from the power plant which may or may not have been contaminated with radiation, Hogan said. Those include gloves, tools, rags, paper and resins.

Hogan said he could not immediately explain how the liquid was dripping from the truck, which was owned and operated by the Hacke Trucking Co. and was under contract to Commonwealth Edison.

Shucker said investigators were attempting to retrace the truck's route along Interstate 90 to determine if any radiation could be detected along the highway.

He said no evacuations were ordered, other than to move some parked trucks stopped at the truckstop.

Court to consider Dakota eagle case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to consider giving the government broader power to prevent Indians from capturing and killing bald and golden eagles.

The court said it will review a ruling that allows the prosecution of Indians who sell eagles and eagle parts but bars prosecution when the birds are killed on Indian reservations for use in tribal rituals.

The Reagan administration said the ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a case from South Dakota could threaten numerous endangered species besides the eagle.

The appeals court ruling "would require the government to prove either that the protected wildlife was not taken on the reservation — which might be difficult or impossible — or that it was taken for a commercial purpose," government lawyers said.

Last January, the appeals court refused to reinstate part of an indictment against Dwight Dion, a member of the Yankton Sioux tribe accused of illegally killing and selling eagles.

The appeals court said Dion may not be prosecuted for capturing eagles, but it upheld his conviction for selling eagle carcasses and eagle feathers.

Members of the Sioux tribe have the right to hunt the eagles on their reservation in South Dakota for their religious ritual needs, the appeals court said.

The Endangered Species Act and the Eagle Protection Act do not empower federal officials to override an 1858 treaty with the tribe that guaranteed Indian hunting rights, the appeals court said. But the Indians "do not have a treaty right to sell such birds," it added.

The prosecution of Dion and other tribal members stemmed from a 2½-year undercover investigation by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Federal agents posing as traders and collectors purchased numerous eagle carcasses and parts from members of the Sioux tribe.

The bald eagle is considered an endangered species in nearly all states. Justice Department lawyers said the appeals court ruling also threatens government efforts to protect such animals as the grizzly bear, the gray wolf, the peregrine falcon and the whooping crane.

The government said there are 28 Indian reservations with a population of 91,000 Indians in those seven states.

Companion says diver lost track of altitude

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — A companion of a 22-year-old Missoula skydiver who fell to her death Sunday afternoon near Stevensville said Monday she may have lost track of her altitude and failed to pull her parachute in time.

Mary G. Deutsch, a nurse at St. Patrick's Hospital in Missoula, died about 5 p.m. Sunday when her parachute failed to open during a jump from 9,000 feet at the Stevensville Airport.

She died on impact from massive trauma, Ravalli County Sheriff and Coroner Dale Dye said.

Russ Read, a fellow-jumper on the University of Montana Silvertip Skydivers jumping team, said ground observers saw Ms. Deutsch bring in her arms to a position to open her parachute, but it never opened.

"She tried to extract the pilot chute for the main parachute, but it appears that she lost track of her sense of altitude," Read said.

"She did pull the emergency or reserve parachute, but only from 30 feet or so, and the parachute had no time to come up," he added. "Why it occurs, I don't think anyone knows."

Read also said he believed Ms. Deutsch was conscious and did not pass out during the jump.

According to authorities, the woman and two companions jumped from the plane almost simultaneously and performed some maneuvers together. At about 3,500 feet, they let go and drifted about 100 feet apart. The others deployed their parachutes, but there was no sign of Ms. Deutsch's chute opening or no evidence that she pulled either cord.

Dye said Ms. Deutsch had logged 51 jumps since her first in May and was considered an adept jumper.

Salt Lake City crime rate plummets

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Despite a 10.7 percent increase in reported crime during the first half of 1985, Salt Lake City's crime ranking fell 13 notches among cities with more than 100,000 residents, FBI figures show.

The six-month totals, compared with figures for all of 1984, lower the city's rank from 25th to 38th among 178 cities of similar size.

During the first half of the year, Salt Lake City reported 45.8 major offenses per thousand residents. The number of major crimes jumped from 7,931 in the first half of 1984 to 8,787 for the same period this year.

The major crime category includes murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft, auto theft and arson.

Market in a breather from recent advance

By JAMES F. PELTZ
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market took a breather from its recent advance with a mixed showing in active trading Tuesday.

Prices opened higher and it appeared the market was ready to score its sixth consecutive gain. But the upswing faded after two hours, just when the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed above its record high of 1,359.54, set July 19.

The average then fell nearly 7 points but trimmed the loss by the closing bell to 3.92 points, finishing at 1,350.81.

Declines overall slightly trailed advances on the New York Stock Exchange, but the NYSE composite index lost 0.14 to 107.50. Auto, telephone and computer issues led the losers, while several financial stocks moved ahead.

Big Board volume swelled to 110.35 million shares from 78.54 million on Monday, which was a semi-holiday because of Columbus Day.

Some analysts interpreted the market's mixed performance as a typical "correction," with many investors taking profits following the recent runup, as opposed to a significant reversal in investor sentiment.

The economic backdrop showed continued signs of improvement, meanwhile, as the Commerce Department reported a 0.4 percent drop in business inventories for August — the biggest decline in more than two years.

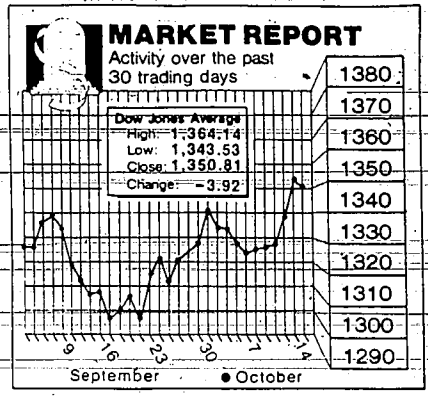

Much of Wall Street's attention Tuesday was given to third-quarter corporate earnings, however, particularly in the banking sector.

J.P. Morgan rose ⅛ to 50½ and Wells Fargo climbed 1 to 54⅛ after both posted higher profits. Industry leader Citicorp also reported improved earnings but they fell short of Wall Street expectations, and the stock lost 1⅝ to 42⅝.

Other issues dropping amid what were viewed as disappointing earnings were W.R. Grace, off 1 to 38⅝; Alaska Air, 2⅛ to 18⅜, and Hilton Hotels, 1⅞ to 66.

Auto stocks fell after the industry said its early October domestic sales fell 10 percent from a year earlier, largely because most of the companies' special financing offers expired Sept. 30. General Motors fell 1 to 69⅛, Ford Motor lost ⅝ to 46⅝ and Chrysler slipped ⅛ to 37⅜.

On the NYSE's active list, American Telephone & Telegraph lost ⅞ to 20⅝, Pan American World Air. at 2¾, up 0.72.

Palmolive jumped 3¼ to 30⅞.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 130.42 million shares.

The American Stock Exchange market value index fell 0.11 to 224.07. On the Amex, BAT Industries slipped 1-16 to 3 11-16 after a 1 million-share block crossed at that price.

MIT professor chosen for economics prize

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Franco Modigliani, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor, won the 1985 Nobel Prize in economics Tuesday for theories he developed 30 years ago on personal savings and the value of businesses.

"I am obviously very pleased," the 67-year-old economist said at his home in Belmont, Mass. "It's always nice to hear that the work I've done is appreciated and regarded as important."

Modigliani, who emigrated from his native Italy to the United States at the beginning of World War II, was cited for theories on how people save for their old age and for refining economic thinking on how to determine the market value of businesses.

Tuesday's award marked the 13th time in the 17 years of the prize that it was won or shared by an American.

Professor Assar Lindbeck, a member of the Swedish prize jury, said after the announcement that Modigliani's work "is not explaining what we should do. It explains what we see and helps us understand the world."

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, which made the award, said Modigliani developed a life-cycle hypothesis of household saving and formulated theorems used to value firms and capital costs.

Modigliani's savings theories, worked out in the 1950s with a student, the late Richard Brumberg, helped demonstrate how people reduced their savings when they could count on improved pensions.

He said Tuesday that he leaves decisions about household finances to his wife, Serena. As he expressed it: "I give the general ideas, and my wife makes better specific decisions."

Theories Modigliani developed with colleague Merton Miller, also in the 1950s, dealt with corporate finance.

Lindbeck said work by Modigliani and Miller showed that "a company manager should not maximize annual profits but maximize the value of shares on the stock market."

Their theory also showed, he said, that "a company with a large debt is as valuable as a company with a smaller debt if their future profits are as big."

The academy said that in the field of individual economics, Modigliani's thinking was now "the basis of most dynamic models" used to study consumption and saving.

Lindbeck appointed to lower personal savings in heavily pensioned Sweden as the type of field where Modigliani's savings ideas were applied. Swedes saved 6 to 7 percent of their incomes 25 years ago, he said, but now save virtually nothing because of increased pensions.

Modigliani's partners in developing the theories did not share in the prize, Lindbeck said, because the

Wheeling-Pittsburgh, steel union reach tentative accord on contract

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers union reached a tentative contract agreement Tuesday that could end an 87-day strike, the steel industry's biggest shutdown in a quarter-century.

The Associated Press learned that 19 local union presidents, bargaining for 8,200 picketing workers, voted 13-6 to recommend a wage and benefit package worth up to $19 an hour. The contract is still subject to ratification by the union members.

Despite the settlement, the steelmaker, still faced the possibility of being forced into liquidation by its lenders.

A source among the 11 banks holding more than half of the company's $530 million in bad-loans said the contract offer may be more than Wheeling-Pittsburgh can afford if it hopes to survive its planned reorganization under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy laws during a time of abundant steel supplies and weak prices.

"We're working on the numbers, but we have doubts. It's doubtful the company has sufficient cash flow and asset basis to go forward as a viable operation," said the source, who spoke on condition he not be named. "Our preliminary numbers indicate they don't have enough."

He said the lenders are considering whether to file in court to have the company liquidated under Chapter 7 of bankruptcy laws.

The walkout began July 21 when the company exercised its court-approved power to reject the previous contract and lowered total labor costs from $21.40 to $17.50 per hour.

The company Monday presented a package of wages and benefits worth at least $18 per hour with a provision for a $1-per-hour bonus if steel prices rise.

The union would also get one voting seat and one observer's seat on the board of directors, pension protection, retroactive life and medical insurance and a promise to renegotiate whenever Wheeling-Pittsburgh emerges from Chapter 11 reorganization.

Paul Rusen, the union's chief negotiator, has said the banks, led by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York, have pressed Wheeling-Pittsburgh to limit total labor costs to $16.50 per hour.

Nobel laureate lauds student

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — The newest Nobel laureate in economics paid tribute Tuesday to a student who died in 1951 after helping lay the groundwork for theories on why people and nations save money.

"He was a very, very dear friend and a great collaborator," Franco Modigliani, professor of economics and finance at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said of Richard Brumberg, a graduate student who wrote two papers with him on savings.

Just before the publication of the second paper, Brumberg died of a brain tumor. He was 25.

"It was a great personal tragedy," Modigliani, 67, said at his comfortable home in the Boston suburbs, where he was up early fixing his breakfast of rye toast and coffee.

It is Modigliani's deep feeling for colleagues such as Brumberg and his work that has made him so popular a theorist and professor, students say.

"He gets insulted if you're working on something interesting and you don't come and talk to him about it," said Jim Kahn, a graduate student in the Sloan School of Management, where Modigliani has taught since 1962.

The professor told reporters at a news conference Tuesday that his theories were colored by a revelation he had while working at a savings bank as a young man.

He found, he said, that the bank salted away money when times were good and therefore "had it when you needed it most."

His theory on personal savings — that people at all levels of society tend to save money during good times as they look toward retirement — went against the thought of the day. "The generally accepted view was that saving was something done by rich people," he said.

A later theory on corporate finance — developed with Merton Miller, now of the University of Chicago — also debunked economic myth. "The common wisdom was that if a firm needs capital it gets it through equity or borrowing . . . We found that except for taxes, it makes no difference how a firm is financed," he said.

The fundamentals he laid out in the 1950s have changed little over the years, although saving habits have changed with the introduction of Social Security and pension plans, Modigliani said.

The Reagan administration doesn't seem to understand why people save and how dangerous the nation's deficit is, he added. "The growing deficit is a disastrous policy which is going to be very, very destructive to you people, who are young," he told reporters.

Mrs. Modigliani manages their personal savings and finances, he admitted.

"I'm all right when it comes to broad strategy," he said. "But I always choose the particular stock that fails. I occasionally make money only when I make a complete mistake."

President signs interest measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed into law Tuesday a bill setting new minimum interest rates that must be charged in property transactions when the seller provides part of the financing.

The "imputed interest" legislation affects mainly multimillion-dollar transactions, although it could affect arrangements involving ordinary homebuyers.

For transactions in which the seller provides financing of $2.8 million or less, the interest rate charged the buyer must be 9 percent or the rate at which the federal government borrows money for a similar term, whichever is smaller. Most deals involving seller financing of more than $2.8 million will require a minimum rate that matches the federal rate.

If the minimum rates are not charged, the Internal Revenue Service will tax the seller as if they were. The new rules replace a version that expired on June 30 and are retroactive to that date. They will not affect any loan that is assumed after June 30, 1985.

To help replace tax revenues lost by the rules, the bill increases from 18 years to 19 years the period over which real estate must be depreciated.

Attached to the bill is a provision stating that loans of $90,000 or less made by a taxpayer to a "continuing-care facility" are not loans but advance payment of fees. That change will exempt such payments from a 1984 law that sets rules for taxing below-market loans and cost the government about $44 million over five years.

A continuing-care facility is an institution that, for a one-time fee of $90,000 or so plus a monthly charge of about $1,000 guarantees to provide lifetime care and living quarters for an elderly person. The change has the effect of allowing the financing of such care with tax-free money, even though a person without such means gets no such break.

Trusts can help finance college education, save on taxes

Sylvia Porter

You've just finished working out the final crucial ways to finance your child's freshman year at college.

It's only October but already the reminders are coming in from all sides that you must get ready to pay for the costs of tuition, board, room and a myriad of other expenses for your child's sophomore year. And that tells you that the same reminders will be coming up for the year following and the year after that. And you're "lucky"; only "one" child.

Of course, a college education can be financed today by a wide variety of sources. And even if you're a student whose family has an annual income over a certain level, there's still plenty of federal grant and loan aid available — if you can demonstrate the need for the aid.

Moreover, in addition to parental support, educational funding sources include: a scholarship based on either need or merit; a state-sponsored grant or loan; a bank or life insurance loan; a grandparent's gift; a trust or custodial account; and that old standby, a part-time or summer job.

But if saving taxes is an objective, too — and you can't write off the cost of a direct gift to a child or grandchild on your tax return — creating a trust is an educational funding method you well may have not explored, but should do so now.

Here are examples of trusts that you can use to help your student through college, as explained to me by Michael F. Sassi, senior vice president of Chemical Bank's trust group, headquartered in New York.

• Short-term (Clifford) trust: You transfer money or income-producing property to a trust for a minimum of 10 years and a day. The earnings are to be paid to or used for the child and taxed according to the child's tax bracket. When the trust ends, the principal reverts to you.

• Long-term trust: In this case, you part permanently with the property transferred to the trust. The trust terms provide that the income and principal are to be used for the child's college education, with any balance of principal to be paid to the child on reaching a specified age.

• Charitable remainder trust: This can be an ideal education fund if 1) you're in a high income tax bracket or hold property with substantial appreciation, and 2) you want to benefit the college beyond the child's needs by a significant gift. The trust pays an annuity to the child for a fixed number of years, and then the principal goes to the college.

The income earned by any of these trusts is removed from your higher tax bracket and taxed instead to the child or the trust in lower brackets (except the charitable remainder trust, which pays no tax). And if you create a charitable remainder trust, you get an immediate income tax deduction for the gift of remainder interest to charity as well as avoid capital gain tax liability on a gift of appreciated property.

CAUTION: Payments made by a trust for a child's education may be deemed to fall within the parental obligation of support. One way to avoid this is to set up the trust several years before the child reaches college age. You then also arrange for the trust to distribute income annually to an account in the child's name before he or she is ready to enroll.

When a trust like this is established, you must take care to avoid or to minimize the federal gift tax by means of the annual exclusion and the unified estate and gift tax credit.

Or let's say you prefer an outright gift. If you're a grandparent and you make tuition payments of any size to your grandchild's college, the money isn't subject to gift tax. To avoid problems, you might set up a custodianship under the state's gift to minors act.

You lose flexibility or the tax benefits of a trust, and the child receives control at majority. The income from the gift is taxable to the child and if the money is used to satisfy a duty of support, it's taxable to the parent or the one under a legal obligation of support. It doesn't matter who makes the gift or is the custodian.

The key: When your child or grandchild is applying to a college, get all the assistance you can from the school's financial aid office. And consult a banker equipped to answer any of your questions about loans, trusts and custodianships.

Auto sales sluggish

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic auto sales in early October were 10.1 percent less than a year ago, a decline attributed to the expiration of most special financing deals and rebates.

The financing arrangements had cleared out stocks of leftover 1985 cars and pushed September sales to record levels. Only limited special programs have been announced so far in the new 1986 model year.

In the Oct. 1-10 industry reporting period, only Chrysler Corp. among the Big Three reported a gain from last year, selling 39.2 percent more cars than in the comparable period in 1984.

General Motors Corp. sales were down 14.8 percent and Ford Motor Co.'s declined 14.8 percent.

Among the smaller producers, American Honda Motor Co. reported sales of Ohio-made cars were down 35.7 percent. American Motors Corp. sales were down 32.5 percent and Volkswagen of America Inc.'s were up 43.3 percent.

"Chrysler's sales probably were way up because their incentive financing programs lasted three days longer than GM's and Ford's," said Gary Glaser, an automotive industry analyst at First Boston Corp. in New York. "It's possible there were some added Chrysler sales in anticipation of a possible strike at Chrysler."

Total sales for the Oct. 1-10 period came to 202,002 compared with 224,792 a year earlier.

Nobody wants high food prices. But when different food stores each tell you they give you lower prices than the others, it's real hard to believe what you hear. The fact is no supermarket can truthfully guarantee you the lowest price on every single item every day of the week. And your Safeway Store doesn't claim to. But we do promise to give you an honest deal. And that means passing along manufacturer savings to you. Offering you low prices every day and outstanding specials every week. And quality foods, especially where they count most—in our Meat, Produce and Dairy Departments. Since more people come to Safeway than any other food store in America, you've got to believe we're doing something right. And it isn't a lot of cheap talk. It's a good honest deal.

Nobel

The economist was born in Rome in 1918 and earned a doctorate in jurisprudence at the University of Rome in 1939, a year before he and his wife fled to the United States to escape the fascist regime of Benito Mussolini.

He earned a doctorate in social science at New York City's New School for Social Research in 1944.

Two of the most influential postwar American economic theorists, Paul Samuelson and Milton Friedman, won the Nobel economics prize in 1970 and 1976 respectively.

The academy said Modigliani and Friedman differed in their theories of how people saved, with Friedman arguing that people saved both for themselves and their descendants and Modigliani contending they saved only for themselves.

Announcement of this year's Nobel prizes will continue in Stockholm Wednesday with disclosure of the winners in physics and for chemistry.

Nobel spokesmen said this year's literature prize would be announced Thursday, also in Stockholm.

The economics prize is the only Nobel award not established by the will of Afred Nobel, the Swedish industrialist who invented dynamite. It came into being in 1968, funded by the Swedish national bank, and was awarded for the first time in 1969.

Like the others, it carries a cash award this year of 1.8 million Swedish kronor (about $225,000).

Presentation ceremonies will be held in Oslo, Norway, for the peace prize and Stockholm for the others on Dec. 10, the anniversary of Nobel's death in 1896.

New appointees unlikely to alter Fed policy

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's central bank will aim for the middle ground in conducting monetary policy even though the Reagan administration's two new appointees are likely to push for lower interest rates, economists said Monday.

And despite speculation about his possible departure, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker is likely to keep exercising his firm grip on the board's deliberations for the foreseeable future, these analysts said.

Questions about the Federal Reserve arose last week with President Reagan's nomination of Kansas banker and farmer Wayne Angell and Assistant Treasury Secretary Manuel Johnson to seats on the Fed's seven-member board.

Angell, 55, was nominated to a nine-year term replacing Lyle Gramley, who left the board on Sept. 1, while Johnson, 36, would take a full 14-year term next February, replacing Charles Partee.

Both men would appear to be less concerned about inflationary dangers and more interested in pushing interest rates down to stimulate economic growth.

Johnson's nomination in particular is a victory for supply-side economists and politicians who believe in the need for sharp cuts in tax rates and an easy monetary policy to stimulate economic growth.

Supply-siders such as Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., have contended that Volcker's anti-inflation policies have slowed economic growth.

While Angell is not so easily categorized, he, like Johnson, has criticized the Volcker-led Fed in the past for failing to provide enough stability for monetary growth. Angell's appointment was seen as a response to political pressures from farmers who have been hard hit by Fed policies that lowered inflation but lowered crop and land prices as well.

Angell, who operates a 3,300 acre farm with his brother and is also chairman of a small agricultural bank in Kansas, is expected to lend a sympathetic ear to the farmers' plight.

With the Angell and Johnson nominations, which are expected to win easy Senate passage, President Reagan will have appointed four of the seven members of the Fed board.

Reagan's two other appointments, Vice Chairman Preston Martin and Martha Seeger, have at times dissented from the Volcker-led majority, echoing arguments made inside the administration that looser monetary controls were needed.

The Fed controls growth of the money supply, and in turn influences interest rates, in an effort to promote long-term economic growth with low inflation.

Even with the Reagan majority of the board, few economists are predicting much of a change in policies.

They cite the fact that monetary policy is actually set by the larger 12-member Federal Open Market Committee which includes not only the seven Fed governors but also the presidents of five of the Fed's regional banks. Volcker still has many allies among the regional bank presidents, analysts say.

"Johnson and Angell probably won't have that dramatic an impact," said David Berson, an economist at Wharton Econometrics. "Certainly they will lean toward easing and being more concerned with growth than inflation. But both men appear to be pragmatists and that will make it easier for Volcker — the consumate pragmatist — to work with them."

Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm, said that even before the appointments, the Fed has been ignoring rapid growth in the money supply this year in favor of policies to spur further economic expansion.

"Volcker has fought to bring inflation down and the evidence now is that inflation is beaten," Evans said. "Now he has the dollar on his mind and he doesn't want to tighten for that reason."

Volcker and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III both participated in a recent meeting in which the United States and four key allies pledged to work to devalue the dollar in order to alleviate American trade problems. Higher interest rates act to boost the dollar's value by attracting overseas investment.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., said Volcker would probably find it easier to work with Angell, whom he termed "a moderate" on money matters than with Johnson.

"Manley Johnson is a strong supply-sider dedicated to the proposition that money should get out of the way of supply-side economics and the Fed should print as much of it as the public wants," Wyss said. "He is going to make the slant very much in the direction of easier money, but while Volcker is in control that probably won't make a lot of difference."

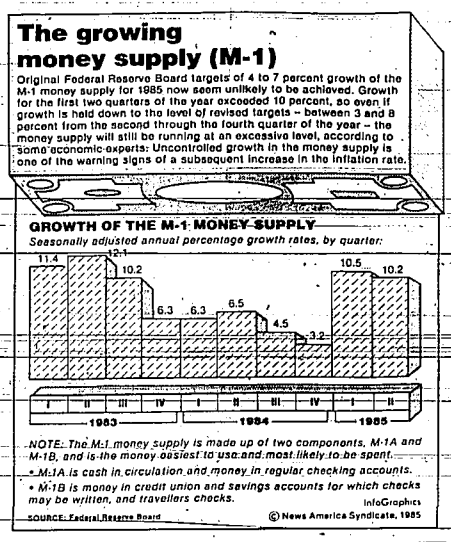

There were rumors recently that the administration was anxious to see Volcker depart before his term expires in August 1987 and would offer him the presidency of the World Bank as an inducement to leave.

However, Volcker apparently let it be known that he wasn't interested in the job and administration officials are now saying they are pleased with the prospect that Volcker will serve out his term.

Baker, in a televised interview Sunday, said he had enjoyed a "good relationship" with Volcker and expected him to remain in the job, saying "he would have no reason" to leave.

Kamiah lumber mill reopening nearer

KAMIAH (AP) — A California firm has received preliminary approval from the Idaho County Industrial Development Corp. to obtain financing to purchase and reopen the Twin Feathers lumber mill here, officials say.

The Potlatch Corp. closed the mill in February 1984, laying off 147 workers in this community of 1,300.

The ICIDC has passed a resolution indicating it would consider granting $3 million of industrial revenue bonds to finance the purchase of the mill by the Pene Land Co. Inc.

ICIDC board chairman Doug Higgins of Kamiah said the board is waiting for a feasibility study by Pene Land Co. to prove its eligibility for the bonds.

The Pend Land Co. recently bought 160,000 acres of timber land on Craig Mountain south of Lewiston.

The Pene Land Co. has a buyer for the bonds if the IC-IDC issues them, said Bruce Bullamore, Lewis-Clark Economic Development Corp. director, who is acting as a liaison for the firm.

Pene Land Co. has been negotiating with Potlatch to buy the mill, Potlatch spokesman Todd Maddock said Thursday evening.

"I think it's our intention to sell it and hope it would be operated," Maddock said. "They (Pene Land Co.) appear to be a legitimate bidder, of course."

The prospect of having the mill reopened and 100 to 120 back at work appeals to the IC-IDC directors, Higgins said.

The Pene Land Co. would rehire workers laid off by the closure, paying wages realistic with the current wood products economy, Bullamore said.

Bullamore, of Lewiston, said Pene Land would like to have the mill operating before winter, but Higgins said he expects the process will take longer.

Potlatch Corp. spokesman Todd Maddock was not available for comment.

North Idaho electronics company posts loss during second quarter

POST FALLS (AP) — Another Idaho electronics company has posted losses amid the continued depression in the nation's high-technology computer industry.

Transtector Systems Inc. reported second quarter losses of over $14,000 for the three-month period that ended Aug. 31, the second straight quarter the firm has suffered a loss.

As with Micron Technology Inc. of Boise, which has suffered significant losses this year because of what it claims in unfair Japanese competition, Transtector said it had suffered an 8 percent decline in sales for the quarter to $2.64 million.

During the same period a year ago, the company posted net income of nearly $340,000.

For the first six months of its budget year, the manufacturer of voltage protectors for computers and other electronic equipment recorded net losses of just over $148,000 on sales of $5.04 million, a 12 percent decline from the previous year.

Micron and other U.S. computer chip manufacturers have accused the Japanese of unfair and predatory sales practices in American intended to drive them out of business and permit Japan to monopolize the U.S. market. The Commerce Department is currently reviewing those allegations, which the International Trade Commission found evidence to support this summer. Earlier this month, the president of Hitachi's U.S. operations declined to appear before a congressional committee to discuss his firm's policies.

Some members of Congress are pressing for retaliatory action against Japan, ignoring administration warnings that such action may not benefit the ailing U.S. electronics industry.

California Republican Sen. Pete Wilson said this week that it was time to "stop turning the other cheek" to the Japanese and take action to force that nation to open its markets to American goods as the U.S. has to Japanese products.

Investors lose latest court round

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — A group of Logan investors attempting to purchase John DeLorean's Logan Manufacturing Co. has lost its latest round in court, an attorney says.

The Utah Supreme Court on Oct. 11 denied a motion by LHIW, Inc., to hear its appeal of a Logan district court decision earlier than the matter normally would come up on the high court's crowded calendar, said attorney David Daines.

However, Daines said Saturday the denial does not affect LHIW's appeal of the lower court's ruling against its attempt to buy Logan Manufacturing.

"It only means we were unsuccessful in getting the Supreme Court to accelerate the proceedings," he said.

LHIW, headed by Logan realtor Ralph Walker, began negotiations more than two years ago to purchase LMC, which manufactures snow-grooming equipment, at an estimated price of $16 million.

The group filed a lawsuit in 1st District Court in August, 1983, claiming DeLorean breached a purchase contract.

Judge VeNoy Christofferson ruled that DeLorean had breached the contract. However, he also said LHIW did not meet the terms of a court-ordered closing of the sale because it offered a $5 million promisory note instead of the required cash.

Daines said Delorean had put up obstacles to the purchase that would have made it impossible for LHIW to receive clear title.

Christofferson also ruled that LHIW is entitled to damages to be determined after the purchase issue is resolved.

Reducing dependence on exports would mute outside critics

Japan unveils plan to increase its domestic spending

By SALLY SOLO
The Associated Press

TOKYO — Seeking to reduce its economy's dependence on exports, the Japanese government unveiled a plan Tuesday to spend more on housing and public works and ease consumer credit so that domestic spending would fuel economic growth.

Foreign Ministry officials said measures to be implemented "in principle, right away" would increase investment in the economy by an estimated $14.4 billion and raise the gross national product by $19.07 billion, or 1.3 percent of Japan's projected fiscal 1985 GNP of $1.463 trillion.

Other measures will be decided upon before the next budget is passed — the end of this year or the beginning of next year — said the officials, who spoke on the condition they not be identified.

Japanese press reports said the plan, which the government has been deliberating since August, was expected to have a larger effect on domestic demand than any previous programs.

The plan, approved at a meeting of the Ministerial Conference on Economic Measures, also stresses improving living conditions, which "in the past tended to be left behind," and altering working conditions, the officials said.

Japan's economic growth in recent years has depended largely on increasing exports, leading to criticism from other industrialized countries whose trade accounts with Japan have mostly been in the red.

At the end of last month, the 24-member Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development warned Japan to stimulate domestic demand or be vulnerable to a U.S. economic slowdown.

The officials said immediate measures include an increase in the number of housing loans made available by the government and improved loan conditions, additional investment in electricity and public gas works, early implementation of public works by local governments, and easing of terms for consumer credit on automobiles and color televisions.

They said measures to be worked out later include continued deregulation, increased holidays for Japanese workers, and utilization of state-owned land.

The officials said tax reforms, considered by some economists a necessary ingredient in boosting domestic demand, would not be part of the present package. Recommendations on tax reform, they said, probably would not be ready until the spring of 1987.

On Monday, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone opened an extraordinary session of the Diet, during which he will try to steer his legislative program through an expected storm of opposition protests over the nation's defense buildup.

In his address to the two-house parliament, Nakasone called on legislators to support his programs for education and tax reform, reapportionment of the Diet and laws intended to ease trade friction by opening Japan's markets wider to imports.

However, the opposition, led by the Japan Socialist Party, has promised to use the 62-day session to corner Nakasone and his ruling Liberal Democratic Party on the issue of a five-year defense plan that is certain to violate the government's policy of limiting military spending to 1 percent of gross national product.

U.S. governors express worries over rising protectionism

TOKYO (AP) — Governors from six southeastern American states expressed concern Monday about growing protectionist sentiment at home and said they believed Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone was sincere in his efforts to resolve U.S.-Japan trade frictions.

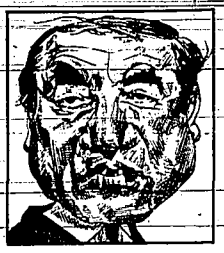

"Too many weak politicians are using the trade deficit as an excuse for lack of willpower in dealing with the federl deficit," said Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee.

"We governors have to balance our budgets every year. Congress should learn to do it too."

The governors convened in Tokyo to attend the 10th annual Southeast U.S.-Japan Association conference, which fosters trade and investment between the regions.

The conference, which opened Monday, comes at a time when more than 200 protectionist measures, many aimed at Japan, are pending in the U.S. Congress.

YASUHIRO NAKASONE
'Fairness' most important

Japan had a record monthly trade surplus of nearly $3.8 billion with the United States in September, the Finance Ministry announced Friday. The nation's trade surplus with the United States in 1984 was nearly $38 billion.

The six governors and Daniel met with Nakasone for an hour before the conference opened. Graham later quoted the prime minister as saying, "The most important point is fairness" and that Japan does not want to be called "unjust."

"I believe Nakasone is sincere, and that the issue of unfairness is a thorn which needs to be excised," Graham said.

"After that, the United States has to treat the problems we've inflicted on ourselves — the big budget deficit, high interest rates and the overvalued dollar."

"Some people are cynical about Nakasone's efforts, but if he weren't sincere, he wouldn't have made those moves against considerable criticism at home," he said. "I encouraged him in his quite courageous stand."

Japan announced a trade package in July that included steps to lower tariffs and relax certification standards for imported goods.

More than 500 executives from the seven member states and 100 top officials from 40 Japanese companies also were attending the conference.

According to Wallace, the Southeast benefits disproportionately from Japanese investment in the United States. Of the estimated $2.6 billion invested by Japan in the United States since 1984, 30 percent went to the Southeast, he said.

About 20 percent of the 80,000 Americans now employed by Japanese companies live in the Southeast, Alexander said.

"The Southeast is a nation of 140 million people with a common thread woven between us and combined efforts bring better results," said Harris. "Plus we have a good product to sell: quality of life, a pro-business attitude, a strong work ethic and of course, southern hospitality."

The governors also competed for investment in their respective states.

Harris suggested to Nakasone that direct air service from Japan to Atlanta be opened.

Martin said — "Harris was not speaking for Charlottesville when he said that."

The governors also expressed the need to improve Japanese understanding of their region.

"When you mention the Southeast to many Japanese, what they think to tell them more real information of are Jack Daniels and Elvis about it. How else could we expect Presley," said Alexander. "We need them to invest there?"

Turmoil slows Central American gains

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — An ecologist who has worked in Central America says political turmoil is preventing countries in the region from working together to improve their economic prospects.

Gary S. Hartshorne, who works on deforestation projects in Central America for the U.S. Agency for International Development, told Utah State University honor students Monday that U.S. intervention is partly responsible for the region's political instability.

Hartshorne, speaking as part of the Universities Field Staff International Lecture Series, said his time in Central America convinced him that Washington does not have a realistic view of problems there.

"The people reporting to the State Department don't get out in the field," he said. "They don't talk with rural people, but instead talk mainly to government officials."

He labeled as a "farce" humanitarian aid approved by Congress for Contras fighting the Nicaraguan government. "It just frees up other money for them to buy rifles, bullets, cannons and helicopters," he said.

Hartshorne believes conditions for citizens of Nicaragua are better than they have been represented by the American media and praised the Sandinista government's efforts to upgrade literacy.

"Progress has been made, and this is reflected in the fact that the bulk of the population supports the Sandinista government, even though they consider themselves to be anti-communist," he said. "It was obvious to me that those I have talked to would support the Sandinistas if the U.S. were to invade Nicaragua or try to overthrow the Sandinista government."

However, he said the region's economic progress was constrained, not only by U.S. intervention, but by ideological conflicts between nations that keep them from cooperating.

New plants look good to mayors

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — A group of Cache Valley mayors say the area needs more meat-packing and animal byproduct disposal plants to enhance future economic development efforts.

Seventeen mayors met this past Saturday for a brainstorming session. They told Bobbie Coray, executive director of the Cache Economic Development Committee, that a strong agri-business base is important for economic growth in the northern Utah valley.

"We need help in saving existing farm industries because many dairy farms in the north end of the valley are already threatened," said Lewiston Mayor LaVor Smith.

"There are cattle and other large animals all over the valley but right now we have disposal problems," he said.

The mayors also told Mrs. Coray they would prefer to see small, non-polluting industries locate in the valley. They also encouraged the committee to woo high-technology businesses and emphasize tourism.

Most of the mayors said poor transportation into and out of the Cache Valley, a lack of investment capital, the absence of an adequate industrial park and few high-salary positions for spouses of business executives are factors hurting economic growth.

As assets, the mayors cited a strong work force, the proximity and cooperation of Utah State University, a strong agri-business base and a commitment to a clean environment among residents.

Royals rally to tie series at 3 apiece

Brett homers to lift K.C. to 5-3 victory over Toronto

BY BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

TORONTO — George Brett did what he's been doing. Dan Quisenberry did what he hasn't done.

And once again, the Kansas City Royals won a struggle of survival in the American League playoffs.

Brett hit a tie-breaking home run and Quisenberry got the final out with the potential season-ending run at the plate in Game 6 Tuesday night, giving the Royals a 5-3 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays to force a decisive seventh game.

The Royals, who trailed the series 3-1 at one point, will send Bret Saberhagen against Blue Jays ace Dave Stieb Wednesday night after once again frustrating Toronto hopes of bringing the first World Series to Canada.

"I don't know what to expect," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said. "They've got their No. 1 pitcher and we've got a 20-game winner. That's exactly what you'd want in a Game 7."

So far, the Kansas City's biggest ace has been Brett.

Brett's solo blast in the fifth inning gave the Royals a 3-2 lead and was his record ninth career playoff home run. Steve Garvey's old mark went by the board when Brett hit his third homer of this series, all off Blue Jays starter Doyle Alexander.

In Game 3, Brett hit two home runs and a double off Alexander on the way to a 4-for-4 night that gave the Royals their first victory in the series and enabled them to snap a 10-game postseason losing streak.

"You can't expect to win three straight, so you have to take it day-by-day, inning-by-inning, pitch-by-pitch," Brett said.

"We're having fun now," Brett added. "I'm sure they're not having too much fun 100 yards down the hall."

Quisenberry, who gave up two game-winning hits earlier in the series, came into the game with two outs in the ninth and runners at first and second and struck out Garth Iorg.

"You can't think about previous things," Quisenberry said. "You have to work those things out of your system. If you don't, you can't get the job done."

Quisenberry, who has led the league in saves the last four years, got the chance to finish the game partly because veteran Hal McRae helped the Royals get off to a good start.

McRae, playing in his 44th postseason game, singled home Kansas City's first run in the first inning and doubled home the second run in the third inning.

"I prefer to hit with men in scoring position than with no one on," McRae said. "I try not to let what's going on around me affect my performance."

Toronto Manager Bobby Cox, who has seen his team leave 17 runners on base in the last two losses, said the home-field might help in Game 7.

Al Oliver, who got those game-winning hits off Quisenberry in Games 2 and 4 but was out of Game 6 before the Royals ace appeared, said: "I'll tell you, this is what it's all about.

"Tomorrow night, we'll find out whether we belong in the World Series. We'll come out to prove we belong," Oliver said. "But no matter what happens, we won't feel we let this city down."

Bruins stay alive by besting Pocatello

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

Near the end of the third game Tuesday night, the scoreboard at the Twin Falls High gym went out, but it wasn't lights-out for the Bruins.

They remained alive in the district Class A-1 volleyball tournament by dumping Pocatello, 15-8, 13-15, 15-6.

The win, coupled with Highland's 16-14, 15-7 victory over Minico in Pocatello Tuesday night, will put the Bruins into a loser-out rematch with the Spartans tonight in the Minico gym tonight at 7.

The winner of that game will meet Highland at 7 p.m. Thursday in Pocatello for the district championship and the district's berth in the state tournament. The loser of that game will play the fourth-place team from District 3 in a playoff Saturday afternoon in Twin Falls to determine which team advances to state.

The Bruins could have put Pocatello away in two games, but in the second game Twin Falls blew a 13-5 lead.

"We got down and let them back in," said Bruins Coach Jerry Sivulich. "They get so worried that they tense up."

Junior Kristin Barton started things off for the Bruins, serving in the first point for Twin Falls in the first game. Barton came back and served in the final two points, notching the first game.

With the Bruins leading 13-5 in the third game, Pocatello called a timeout and regrouped.

Kerri Helgerson entered the game and knocked home seven straight points to tie the game 13-13.

After a side-out, the next two points went to the Indians and the match went to the rubber game.

"It was mistakes," said Sivulich shaking his head and pointing to the second game in the scorebook.

In the third game, Tracy Szabo paced the Bruins to a big lead by scoring the first seven points of the game.

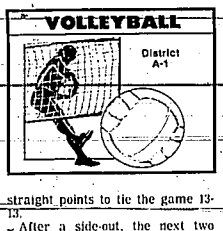

"She really started us out on the right foot," said Sivulich. "She got us on top and we got the momentum."

After Twin Falls had a 9-6 lead, Barton helped close out the match when she served the Bruins to a 14-6 advantage.

It'll be the fourth meeting tonight between the Spartans and the Bruins this year, with Minico

Mushers whip Dietrich, claim first

By The Times-News

BLISS — The Camas County Mushers put together some overwhelming quickness and team work Tuesday night to claim first place in the District 4 Northside Sub-District Volleyball Tournament.

The Mushers, punctuating their regular-season mastery of these same foes, dropped Dietrich twice by surprisingly lopsided scores to lead the way into the district finals against their Southside counterparts Thursday night in Jerome.

The Mushers will take on Southside runner-up Hagerman to open the District playoffs at 5:30 p.m. Thursday at Jerome High School. Dietrich will meet Southside champion Shoshone at 6:45. The two winners will automatically clinch trips to the state tournament in Nampa next week, but an 8 p.m. match will decide the district champion and seed the teams into the state playoff bracket.

Camas County was simply a whirl of movement throughout its brief, efficient court appearance.

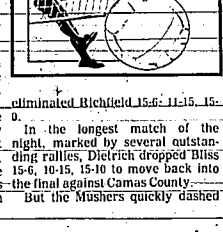

The Mushers opened the night by downing Dietrich 15-4, 15-3 and then went to the sideline while the other teams decided the final challenger.

Richfield sent defending state champion Ketchum/Sun Valley home 15-0, 15-2 as Robin Castle put on a serving exhibition.

Bliss, riding the play of Janine Savage early and Pauline Sears and Venus Smith late, then eliminated Richfield 15-6, 11-15, 15-0.

In the longest match of the night, marked by several outstanding rallies, Dietrich dropped Bliss 15-6, 10-15, 15-10 to move back into the final against Camas County.

Shoshone, Hagerman go to playoff

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Shoshone and Hagerman will represent the Southside Sub-District District 4 schools in district playoff Thursday in Jerome's gym.

The Indians dealt Hagerman a 15-5, 15-6 thrashing, but the Pirates did a similar number on Oakley ending the Hornets' season, 15-8, 15-10, to rejoin Shoshone in the winner's arena.

That will pit Northside Sub-District champion Camas County against Hagerman at 5:30 p.m., while Shoshone and Dietrich, Northside runner-up, will meet at 6:45. The top two teams will earn a trip to state competition at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa, Oct. 25-26.

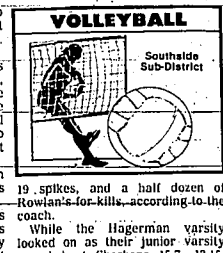

Coach Larry Messick's Indians upped their season record to 20-1, their only loss coming to Buhl. He said though that while Shoshone may have set a win-loss school record and that the Indians are no strangers to state, they're not about to look past Dietrich.

"They might be the best team we've played," he said. "District is scary as can be."

Messick credited Tuesday night's championship win over the Pirates to Cory Hibbard and Shelly Rowlan. Between the two, they hit 19 spikes, and a half dozen of Rowlan's for kills, according to the coach.

While the Hagerman varsity looked on as their junior varsity squad beat Shoshone 15-7, 13-15, 15-12, it was busy readying itself for a loser-out match with Oakley.

League, umpires accept Nixon as dispute arbitrator

By HAL BOCK
The Associated Press

TORONTO — Former President Richard M. Nixon has been selected as the arbitrator in the contract dispute between the Major League Umpires Association and the two leagues, according to officials representing the two sides.

Nixon is expected to hold a hearing either Friday in New York or Saturday in the American League city where the World Series is scheduled to open that day.

The site and date of the hearing will depend on the outcome of the league playoffs, according to presidents Chub Feeney of the National League and Bobby Brown of the American and umpires union attorney Richie Phillips.

The umpires had balked at working the expanded playoff series, which had been a best-of-five since being introduced in 1969, but became a best-of-seven this year as part of baseball's new basic agreement with the players union.

The umpires had threatened to work only the first five games unless they received more money for the two extra games. Last year, they struck three American League playoff games and the first four games in the National League series, returning only for the final game when Commissioner Peter Ueberroth agreed to arbitrate their dispute.

RICHARD M. NIXON
Trusted by both sides

The settlement a year ago called for payment of $10,000 per umpire for the 12 men working the two series, and a contribution of $160,000 to a pool for distribution among the other major league umpires who were not working. The union had sought to improve both of those figures in the expanded playoffs this year.

Cosell book surprises Gifford and Simpson

By BRUCE LOWITT
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — "I wouldn't work with him," Frank Gifford said Tuesday of Howard Cosell, his former Monday Night Football broadcasting colleague who attacked Gifford — and numerous other people — in his controversial new book.

"I can only feel sorry for somebody who I thought was a real friend for 31 years, somebody who may be at the end of a career and literally lashes out at all the people and establishments that have made that career possible," Gifford said. "It's sad."

In his book, I Never Played the Game, Cosell said of Gifford, "I got embarrassed listening to him make mistake after mistake. Funny, when you're in the booth, you tend to overlook a lot of Frank's mistakes because you're concentrating on your own job. That's impossible, however, when you're listening to him on television. And he came across like a male mannequin, his voice still too weak and undramatic to have any impact."

Wood River pulls closer to district title

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

HAILEY — "I thought it would be harder. We did what we had to to — first time we've beat them in two games," said Wood River Coach Dave Neumann just after his Wolverines blasted the Buhl Indians 15-7, 15-9 to move within a win of the District 4 Class A-2 volleyball championship Tuesday night.

The defending district champs will get their chance here Thursday night, taking on the winner of a 6:30 p.m. matchup between the Indians and Burley. The Bobcats stayed alive by beating Jerome 15-5, 10-15, 15-10 in a match in Burley Tuesday night.

The championship match is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., with the district champ getting a berth to the state A-2 tournament in Pocatello Oct. 25-26. The runner-up will meet the second-place team from District 6 for a shot at the state tournament Saturday afternoon in the Pocatello High School gym.

Tuesday's games
Wood River 15-15, Buhl 7-9
Burley 15-10-15, Jerome 5-15-10 (loser out)

Thursday's games
At Wood River High School
Burley vs. Buhl, 6:30 p.m. (loser out)
Wood River vs. Burley or Buhl, 7:30 p.m.

The Wolverines' Dianna Knight and Sunny Blades put in four winners each. Junior hitters Holly Bernhagen and Kim Homer contributed kills and the Indians had their backs to the wall down one game.

Brenden's serving, along with a kill-off-the-block, pulled Buhl to an early second game lead. Strong net play by both teams kept the score within a point until Knight served the Wolverines to 8-5. It was then that Bernhagen caught fire. Twice keeping the ball in play with leaping saves, turning in mid-air to place a soft-shot for another point, blocking a Brenden spike while adding two more slams of her own.

Brenden blocked a Wolverine shot for an Indian side-out. Wood River was called for carrying the ball and let the next shot drop untouched, but Bernhagen returned service to her team and Knight along with junior Lainie McMillen blocked the Indian's final attempt to the floor put an early end to the match.

Wood River's "swing" offense, patterned after the the United States men's volleyball team's offense, proved consistent throughout the game and their attack never faltered although Buhl's play often appeared tentative with Brenden and senior outside hitter Holly Juker on the back line.

Buhl and Burley face the unenviable challenge of winning three straight to prevent a Wolverine return to the state tournament. Buhl Coach Pat Thornsberry may have best expressed the Indians desire as she left the court. "We aren't out of it yet!"

In Burley, the serving of Tana Jensen helped keep the Bobcats alive, despite a second-game lapse that helped Jerome get back into the match. After losing the second set 10-15 and battling to stay ahead in the third, Burley finally put the match away, ending Jerome's season.

Cosell

Cosell was on ABC's Monday-night coverage of National Football League games from its inception in 1970. Gifford joined him in 1971. Cosell stopped doing the telecasts after the 1983 season.

Gifford, in response to a question at a press luncheon, said he had not read the book and didn't intend to. He said that what he knew of Cosell's comments had been read or told to him. O.J. Simpson, another member of the ABC Monday night NFL broadcasting team, said he had read it and was "surprised the way he characterized some individuals in the book.

"Howard has been a part of my life for 15 years and I thought a positive part," said Simpson, another of Cosell's targets. "I've spent a lot of time with him the last few years, after games having drinks, when I realized he was unhappy about a lot of things. I was just surprised that he wrote them."

One result of the publication in recent weeks of excerpts from the book was ABC's decision to remove Cosell from its World Series coverage team with Al Michaels and replace him with Tim McCarver.

"He was to be part of our game telecasts. That was our original intent," Jim Spence, the senior vice president of ABC Sports, said. "The book was one of the reasons" why Cosell was pulled from the booth and offered a pregame show, which he declined.

Further, Spence said, "we felt it wouldn't be fair or proper for Al to have to work with Howard on the game telecasts after Howard had spoken negatively about him in the book."

The network, Spence said, is "committed to Howard for Sportsbeat (a highly regarded but poorly rated weekend commentary program) through the end of 1985. We have not announced our plans beyond '85.

"In all likelihood, Howard will be working (for ABC) in 1986, albeit on a limited basis — the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Tournament of Champions tennis from Forest Hills.

"With all due respect to Howard," Spence said when asked about the book, "I'm not going to comment further, even though Howard didn't show much respect for a lot of people in his book."

Hagerman coach Cindy Simpkins, in her second year at the helm, assessed the combined varsity and JV results after the last match late in the evening.

"It wasn't bad," she said, "especially when they were playing an A-3 team (Shoshone). Now they have to rise to the occasion on Thursday, but it was nice to know we did it by only putting one senior on the floor."

In the first game, Hagerman ran up an 8-2 lead before Oakley called a time out to try to sort out its problems. The margin expanded to 11-3 though, and after a five-point comeback by the Hornets, Hagerman doused any hopes of a comeback to win in a relatively easy fashion.

Again in the second game, the Pirates blazed to an 8-1 margin, then watched as their opposition came back to within two points to make it 11-9. The Pirates regained momentum, though, and added another point on an Oakley four-hitter to make it 12-9. The match was won when Denne Pharris beat an Oakley hitter at the net.

In other games, Hansen beat Castleford 15-11, 15-7, while Oakley beat Hansen 15-3, 15-12.

They agreed to stay on the job when Phillips and the league presidents agreed to submit the matter to binding arbitration.

Phillips, when contacted in Philadelphia, said, "We reached agreement last Saturday on an arbitrator and I agreed that the league presidents should make the announcement."

He called Nixon "a long-time friend of baseball and a man in whom both sides place a great deal of trust."

Nixon, who lives in Upper Saddle River, N.J., has attended many baseball games in New York.

When he was in the White House, he was an avid Washington Redskins fan and on at least two occasions offered plays to George Allen, then coach of the National Football League team.

"We still think we can beat Minico," said Sivulich.

In Pocatello, the Gem State Conference, champion Rams had to struggle to beat Minico.

"We didn't really play very well," said Highland Coach Peggy Peterson. "Minico came out and did a very good job in the first game and played very aggressively. We were used to stopping that kind of attack, so it took some time for us to adjust."

Peterson said Minico's Stacey Kreigh and Shelly Duncan played well at the net for the Spartans. Bobette Carpenter led the Highland attack with 13 points.

The twosome carded a one-under 141 to win by six strokes over Tom Standley and Duane Schneberger. In net, Jerry and Kelly Magee combined for a 126, topping the runner-up duo of Tom Standley and Norm Thomas by three strokes.

Second flight gross honors went to Rich Thompson and Bill Durbin at 156 with Ray Jeno and Bill Strom and Dan Menousek and Dennis Huffman at 165. Ken Nielsen and Jim Huffman won net at 124, three ahead of Dave Harris and Gary Malone.

Area man enters Ironman

HONOLULU — Jim Gaughran of Sun Valley will compete in the 1985 Bud Lite Triathlon World Championships here Oct. 26.

Gaughran, a retired Stanford University swimming coach, will be the only Idahoan taking part in this year's event, which will draw approximately 1,000 triathles from 45 states and 35 countries.

Davis decides to sue NFL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Texas Christian University running back Kenneth Davis sued the National Football League for $13 million Tuesday because the league barred him from joining any of its teams in the same season he played for his college football.

Davis was available to play after TCU suspended him for accepting money from boosters.

In a related action Tuesday, Superior Court Judge Irving Shimer denied Davis' request for a temporary restraining order to require the league to hold a supplemental draft so Davis could be chosen by an NFL team, said Davis' attorney, Steven Knowles.

The Superior Court lawsuit alleges that "the NFL, through invoking the Red Grange rule, is improperly restricting Mr. Davis' ability to contract with an NFL team, and preventing him from becoming employed, resulting in a loss of earnings," Knowles said in a telephone interview.

It seeks $3 million in general damages and $10 million in punitive damages.

Stargell to become Brave

ATLANTA (AP) — Willie Stargell, who wore only a Pittsburgh Pirates uniform during his 20-year career as a major league baseball player, will rejoin his former manager and become a coach for the Atlanta Braves.

Stargell has agreed to join Manager Chuck Tanner's staff in Atlanta, the Braves said Tuesday. Tanner, fired by Pittsburgh at the end of the 1985 season, was given a five-year contract last week to manage the Braves.

The Braves said Stargell was expected to come to Atlanta this week to sign a contract.

Stargell's duties probably will involve coaching first base and acting as a hitting instructor. Stargell joined Tanner midway through the 1985 season at Pittsburgh as a first base coach.

Stargell retired as a player in 1982 after 20 years with the Pirates. He hit 475 home runs and was co-winner of the National League Most Valuable Player Award in 1979, the year Pittsburgh won the World Series.

Sonics drop Thompson

SEATTLE (AP) — Veteran David Thompson, most valuable player in both the National Basketball Association and American Basketball Association All-Star games, was given his unconditional release Tuesday by the Seattle SuperSonics.

Thompson, 31, has had drug and alcohol problems late in his professional career.

The Sonics had said this summer that they did not intend to re-sign Thompson, 31, to an option year they had in his contract. However, at that time they retained their right of first refusal in case Thompson signed an offer sheet with another club.

Tuesday's decision means that Thompson is a free agent and the Sonics do not want compensation if another team signs him to an offer sheet, Sonics' spokesman Jeff Troesch said.

A's pass on Baker option

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland A's said Tuesday they will not exercise their option on Dusty Baker's 1986 contract, enabling the veteran slugger to become a free agent.

"The A's have discussed this decision with Dusty, and have indicated their strong desire that he return to the A's in 1986 on a mutually agreeable basis," the team said in a statement.

Baker, 36, earned $575,000 in his first season with the A's this year, and his option salary would have been $700,000.

Drug testing considered

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle indicated Tuesday that the National Football League may try to include a mandatory drug testing clause in its next contract with the NFL Players Association.

"There's been talk about it," Rozelle said during a briefing at the league's two-day fall meetings. "You have a lot of owners wanting to make that a subject of collective bargaining."

But Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said it was his feeling from talking to players that most of them would oppose mandatory testing.

The NFL, with union approval, now requires drug testing by urinanalysis at the start of training camp in July but after that can test only players who exhibit what is perceived by physicians to be unusual behavior.

Jerry Miller, who bowls with the Valley League at Magic Bowl, had the week's best series, however, a 719. That barely edged the man who owned the week's best game. Felix McLemore, whose 718 sereis included a 278 game, turned the trick in the Magic Major League.

Twin Falls' best women's score last week belonged to Geana Hite, who bowls with the Thursday Threesome League at the Bowladrome. But Hite's 253 just edged Karen Poe, whose 252 came in the Ladies' Tea League at the Magic Bowl.

Montana St. loses QB Bradley for year

KELLY BRADLEY
Shoulder injury

College football

"His arm looked like a rubber snake," MSU sports information director Bruce Parker said of photographs of the arm after the injury.

Bradley, a 6-foot-3, 205-pound junior, was injured Saturday on a running play in the third quarter against Northern Arizona — a game the Bobcats lost 27-24.

He was tripped up by an NAU defender, and used his right arm to brace his fall on the artificial turf surface, Parker said.

Bradley, who was picked this year to repeat as the Big Sky Conference's offensive most valuable player, will be replaced by senior quarterback Greg Andal.

Andal, a 6-foot-2, 190-pound senior, has seen limited action this year in MSU's 86-0 victory over Eastern Oregon and in last Saturday's contest against NAU after Bradley was hurt. His has completed 8 of 18 passes for 105 yards and two touchdowns, and has been intercepted three times.

Bradley had completed 162 of 272 passes for 1,891 and 16 touchdowns this year, but also has thrown 14 interceptions, contributing to the Bobcats' disappointing season so far.

MSU, the defending national Divison I-AA champion, is 1-5 this season and 0-3 in conference play.

"When you lose a quality player like Kelly, it obviously hurts a football team," head coach Dave Arnold said.

Arnold said his team's offense won't change, but that its game planmay be simplified some.

"Both Greg (Andal) and Kelly (Sherwin) have worked hard and understand the offense," he said. "We have every confidence in them."

Bradley's dislocated elbow was one of the toughest elbows the team's orthopedic surgeon has had to reposition, Parker said. Bradley's arm is in a splint and sling.

Last season Bradley passed for 4,427 yards and 38 touchdowns, and was named to The Associated Press All-America third team.

Vandals drop to fourth in this week's I-AA poll

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The University of Idaho has fallen from third place to fourth in the latest NCAA Division I-AA college football poll.

The Vandals, who defeated Weber State 31-28 last Saturday, received 67 votes this week, four less than third-place Middle Tennessee State. MTSU and Idaho were tied with William & Mary for third place last week.

The University of Nevada-Reno, ranked 11th last week, rose to seventh in this week's poll, following a 41-31 victory over 10th-ranked Eastern Washington University. EWU fell to 17th in this week's poll.

Both Idaho and UNR are 5-1 for the season.

Richmond (6-0) and Grambling State (5-0) are ranked 1 and 2, respectively, in this week's poll, as they were last week.

The poll is compiled by a four-man panel of athletic directors of Division I-AA schools, including Babe Cassia, athletic director at Idaho State.

Kareem signs on with Lakers for his 18th NBA campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, confident that his talents haven't been eroded by age, has added another year to his contract with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Abdul-Jabbar, the National Basketball Association's all-time leading scorer, has reached an oral agreement with the Lakers to extend his $2 million a year contract through the 1986-87 season, General Manager Jerry West said.

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar, the league's oldest player at 38, is coming off a season in which he led the Lakers to the NBA title. He is about to begin his 17th NBA season, longer than any player in league history.

He had announced prior to the 1984-85 season that he was going to retire after the campaign. However, but changed his mind early in the season and signed a new one-year contract that extended through 1985-86.

"I think before this he was a little paranoid about his being capable," said Collins. "But he's gotten a lot of support from a lot people, and his teammates, that he can do it."

The extension also will serve as a way to deflect any retirement rumors that might occur this season.

"I think the extension was his way of protecting the fans," Collins said. "This way people will know he's going to take it year by year.

"He's not going to embarrass himself. He likes the game. He enjoys participating."

"They (the Lakers) have always told him that he could play as long as he wanted to," said Collins. "They've always expressed that. In fact, they pushed him to sign for longer (last year)."

Abdul-Jabbar's desire to continue was important to adding the extension onto the center's contract.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

— Elizabeth Bowen.

To many, today's dummy provides a mystery. They see only the chance of a 3-3 diamond break, which would allow them to discard South's two club losers.

South wins his spade king and draws trumps. What next? Many will play dummy's top diamonds and ruff a diamond, hoping for the 3-3 break (only a 36 percent chance). When this fails, South takes a desperate spade finesse, losing a spade to go with two club losers for down two.

Had South bid a grand slam, his play would have been correct. It was the only reasonable chance to win all 13 tricks. The play for 12 tricks has different priorities.

Needing only one additional diamond trick, South takes his best chance for developing one extra winner. After drawing trumps, South leads a diamond, inserting dummy's 10. He wins East's return, plays the top diamonds and ruffs a diamond. This establishes dummy's fifth diamond to hold the defenders to only one club trick, and South scores his odds-on slam.

Beef brisket and green rice are winners with her family

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Maureen Pavelec has two part-time jobs which keep her so busy she has considered wearing a button carrying the message, "Hello, I'm your mother" at the dinner table.

Occupied as she is, Pavelec is unable to spend the amount of time she would prefer cooking for her family. "I could spend all day in the kitchen and love it," she says.

"I'm that type. I love to try new recipes, so I think my frustration is just not being able to be at home or not making that my first priority."

She has settled for simpler meals and those which can be prepared ahead. "It's lots of soups and stews and things you put on hold in the microwave, and everybody helps themselves. It's almost like a cafeteria," she says.

Pavelec makes sure there is plenty to feed herself, her husband, David, and teenagers, Kris and football-playing Mike, who is 6 feet, 4 inches tall and weighs 250 pounds.

"He is interested in quantity and not quality," she says.

Because of a variable work schedule, it is difficult for her to plan very far ahead. She usually thinks about the evening meal in the morning.

"I keep a running menu in my head. I know what my family likes, and so that's what I fix," she says.

She usually starts the dinner meal before leaving for work. Some days, she makes spaghetti sauce, and lets it simmer all day in the crock pot, and other times, she prepares a big pot of homemade soup and makes biscuits upon her arrival home.

One of her family's favorites is called "meal in a peel." At noon, she washes unpeeled potatoes, coats them with butter or shortening, puts them in the crock pot, turns it on high, and by 5 p.m. they are hot, moist and done. She splits the potatoes and puts "all kinds of toppings on them."

The family favorite is taco topping. She browns one pound of hamburger, adds a package of taco seasoning and a can of tomato sauce. After putting this on the potatoes, she tops it with sour cream and grated cheese, tomatoes, lettuce and chopped onions.

There is an almost infinite amount of toppings which can be put on the potatoes. Stroganoff is good, and she says a combination of a can of chili with ground beef and a can of tomato soup "tastes wonderful."

BRISKET

Allow about ½ pound of brisket per person, because it will shrink a little while cooling. Trim off fat. Salt and pepper and rub with liquid smoke, on both sides. Wrap in foil and cook at 250 degrees for four hours. Remove from oven and cool a bit. Refrigerate overnight. Drain off juices. Set aside 1½-2 cups barbecue sauce. Slice the meat into thin slices, about ¼ inch, keeping the brisket intact as you cut. Put back into foil. Pour the barbecue sauce in between all the slices, so they are all coated. Wrap it up and cook for another four hours, at 250 degrees. Put brisket on a serving platter and serve a bowl of the extra sauce with it.

"The meat just falls apart, it's so tender. If you have any left over, it's really good for sandwiches, but you hardly ever have. I never have any leftover once my son gets it," she says.

Barley salad take honors as dollar-stretcher

Serve a prize-winner

Garden-fresh Pearls O'Barley Salad captured the $4,000 Grand Prize in the Quaker Oats Company's "Stretching Food Dollars" recipe contest for Elaine Schultz, Miami, Florida.

Shultz, an artist, was one of thousands of consumers from all 50 states who entered their favorite, easy-on-the-budget recipes using oats, corn meal, grits, barley, pancake mix and syrup, pork and beans, and specialty bean products.

In creating her prize-winning recipe, Schultz discovered that barley's tender, slightly chewy texture and full-bodied flavor make it a superb base for chilled salads. The colorful combination of cooked barley, stuffed green olives, Swiss cheese cubes, crisp garden vegetables and Italian salad dressing becomes picture-perfect when served on a bed of fresh spinach.

Salads also figured prominently in the contest's two bean categories. Bean Salad Germania, a runner-up, won rave reviews from tasters. This chilled German-style potato salad combines both wax beans and green beans. It is topped with a hot bean dressing made extra easy with prepared pork and beans.

All nine top prize-winning recipes are available free. For your copy, send name and address to: Quaker Contest Winners Booklet, P.O. Box 11257-R, Chicago, Il. 60611.

Pumpkin confection ushers in autumn

The very mention of pumpkin brings fall to mind. Its beautiful golden color and plump round shape make it the premiere late harvest squash. Once it's in the markets, it's almost a sure signal that cold weather and the baking that goes with it are on the way.

Most often pumpkin brings to mind fragrant pie or spicy, rich bread, but here's a new way with the old favorite that's sure to become a tradition. This light and airy pumpkin cake has a buttery-rich and crunchy topping that bakes right on it. It's the most glamorous of all easy-do upside-down cakes. Thinly sliced almonds, lightly toasted to enhance their flavor and crunchiness, bake at the bottom of the pan in a butter, brown sugar and almond liqueur mixture that turns into a rich golden glaze when the cake is turned out. Served warm with a fluff of pumpkin whipping cream, this cake is a perfect fall dessert, or football watcher's treat that packs a nutrition punch, too. In addition to the high Vitamin A of the pumpkin, almonds add vegetable protein, fiber, Vitamin E and a wide range of significant minerals as well.

UPSIDE-DOWN PUMPKIN CAKE

¾ cup light brown sugar
4 tablespoons almond liqueur
1 cup toasted sliced almonds
1 cup sugar plus 2 tablespoons
2 eggs
1 can (16 oz.) pumpkin
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 cup heavy cream

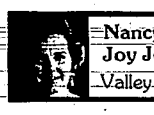

Melt ¼ cup butter in 10-inch wide by 2-inch deep pan or skillet. Stir in ¼ cup brown sugar and 2 tablespoons almond liqueur; mix well. Sprinkle with almonds; set aside.

Dancing nostalgia might produce a chocolate craving

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

We did a switch on the movie "Back to the Future" last weekend. We chaperoned our local high school's homecoming dance.

A friend's husband was an alumni of this school, so we returned with a great stock of nostalgia, only to find that they just don't dance like we used to.

The first difference is the music. It's not live, but rather a professional record-spinner uses all the latest recorded hits for the music.

I don't know how many speakers this disk jockey had, but it was enough to make the bleachers in the gym vibrate. In fact, when I put in earplugs (my daughter about died of embarrassment), I could still hear every note perfectly.

The music was coordinated to a light show with lazer-like beams criss-crossing the floor and flashes and patterns of lights keeping time with the beat, just in case you missed hearing it, I guess.

They just don't dance anymore. They pick a spot and stay there the duration of that particular song. If it's a slow dance they sway, if it's got more of a beat they hop in place. They don't move about the floor like we did in the '50s and '60s.

However, when we finally ventured out on the dance floor to the most dancable of the songs (a country-western hit) we found out why they dance so strangely. The gym floor has been covered with rubber mats. Your feet don't and won't slide or glide, and a waltz would be impossible, so you just stay in one place.

I guess this is the more democratic way to dance, no one is left out because they lack coordination.

It was a fun experience, I'm glad we did it; just this one time.

And likewise, I had a column of diet hints, but just this once let's go for something really wild. I was sent an assortment of chocolates (the cooking kind) and have been experimenting.

Here's a chocolatey cake that's guaranteed to satisfy your sweet tooth. You'll need an 8-inch cake pan. Butter the sides and line the bottom with parchment paper or waxed paper and lightly butter the paper. Preheat your oven to 375 degrees.

FLOURLESS CHOCOLATE ALMOND CAKE

4 ounces semisweet chocolates
½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon apricot preserves
1 tablespoon Grand Marnier
3 eggs
1 cup almonds, blanched and ground
Grated zest of 1 orange
⅓ cup dry breadcrumbs
confectioners sugar

Cream the butter with sugar until well blended and light. Add apricot preserves, Grand Marnier and 1 egg, beating constantly. Add remaining eggs, one at a time beating well after each addition.

Pour mixture into prepared pan and bake for about 25 minutes. This cake should be slightly wet in center when baked so don't over cook.

Cool cake in pan on rack. When cool, turn cake out of pan onto rack. Remove parchment. Sprinkle with confectioners sugar.

The recipe for this recommends you serve each piece on a thin pool of Hazelnut Creme Anglaise. I'll give you that recipe but in case you have a difficult time finding the hazelnuts you could use a basic recipe for a hard sauce. If you are pressed for time, use one of the prepared dessert or ice cream toppings and add a dash of spirits or extracts like almond , amaretto or butterscotch, for a suitable substitute.

HAZELNUT CREME ANGLAISE

1¾ cups hazelnuts with skins (about 7 ounces)
2½ cups milk, plus more if needed
6 egg yolks
½ cup sugar

Preheat oven to 375 degrees and toast the nuts on a baking sheet until lightly colored and fragrant. About 10 minutes.

Chop the nuts finely, making sure not to over do if you are using a food processor and let them get oily. You could also use a food mill to chop them.

Bring the milk to a boil and add the chopped nuts and simmer over lowest heat for 2 to 3 minutes. Remove from heat and let mixture stand, covered, for 1 hour.

Place a colander lined with cheesecloth over a bowl. Pour milk through. Gather nuts in the cheesecloth and squeeze all possible liquid through colander. Discard nuts.

Measure the nut milk and if necessary, add more milk to make 2 cups. Using a heavy-bottomed saucepan bring milk to a boil.

Whisk the egg yolks with the sugar in a bowl. Don't beat them and get them frothy, you just want a smooth texture. Slowly add the milk to the egg mixture, stirring gently, then return mixture to saucepan.

Over a low heat, stir mixture constantly with a wooden spoon. This custard is done when it is thick enough to coat the back of a wooden spoon. It is important you do not boil this.

GREEN RICE

Beat 2 eggs and add:
2 cups milk
2 cups grated cheddar cheese
1 cup chopped parsley or ½ cup parsley flakes
½ cup salad oil
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard

Mix all together, then add:

2-2½ cups slightly cooled, cooked long grain white rice. Bake in a greased 9x13 inch pan for one hour at 350 degrees. Serves 8. This can be mixed ahead, and will keep in the refrigerator for several days uncooked.

BARBECUED BEEF

3 pounds chuck
3 large celery stalks, chopped
1 onion, chopped
2 or 3 green peppers, chopped
2 cups ketchup
1 tablespoon barbecue sauce
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce
1 teaspoon chili pepper
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 tablespoon liquid smoke
½-1 cup water

Chop up all the vegetables, and put everything into a dutch oven. Cook in 300 degree oven for seven hours, or until the meat can be shredded with a fork. At this point, everything is very soft and the vegetables are falling apart. Remove from oven. Debone and cut off fat, and shred the meat. Add about 2 tablespoons brown sugar and mix well. The barbecued beef can be served on rice, hamburger buns or may be put on top of baked potatoes for "meal in a peel."

Pumpkin

Cream remaining ½ cup butter with remaining ½ cup brown sugar, 1 cup sugar and eggs. Stir in 1 cup pumpkin. Combine flour with baking powder, pumpkin pie spice, baking soda and salt. Blend into creamed mixture alternately with milk. Carefully spoon over almonds; level top. Bake in center of oven at 350 degrees, 50 to 55 minutes or until cake tests done. Invert onto parchment or wax paper-lined rack. Cool 15 minutes. Place on serving plate.

Whip heavy cream with remaining 2 tablespoons sugar until stiff. Blend in remaining pumpkin and remaining 2 tablespoons almond liqueur. Serve pumpkin cream with warm or cool cake.

Makes 10 servings.

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Supermarket Shopper

Dear Martin — In one of your recent columns, you spoke of the value of asking for a rain check when a supermarket sale item is sold out.

I had never thought of asking for a rain check, and remembered your advice when I arrived at my local supermarket and discovered that Dawn dishwashing liquid, regularly $1.57 and advertised for just 99 cents, had been sold out.

I asked for a rain check and was given one that allowed me buy up to three bottles when Dawn was again in stock. In the meantime, I found three Dawn 40-cent coupons. Today, I went back and purchased three bottles of Dawn for just 59 cents each.

Dear Robin — A few days after I read your letter, the Federal Trade Commission announced that it had given its official blessing to grocers to distribute rain checks or substitute items when advertised specials are sold out.

In the past, the FTC had been firm in holding that once advertised, a store had to have a sufficient quantity of sale items, no matter what. The commission's new approach seems to be a more practical one. A rain check or a substitute will not always make up for an item whose purchase had been planned on, but it should be enough to satisfy most shoppers.

Dear Martin — I just found a refund form for Mycitracin. At the top it reads: "For a limited time only, get a 50-cent refund and a 25-cent coupon good on your next purchase of Mycitracin." At the bottom, the expiration date is April 30, 1989! — Sally Rose, Houston

Dear Martin — I destroyed several Era laundry detergent labels trying to get them off the containers for an Era refund offer, so when I found a refund offer from Wisk, I switched brands. No luck there either. Wisk labels were just as difficult. So I switched again, this time to Yes, and the labels came off without a problem.

The labels that offer the most difficulty are usually those that are made up of two layers. The top layer is a thin plastic material that easily tears while the base label remains firmly glued to the container.

In addition to Wisk and Era, try getting labels off Mazola Corn Oil, or Palmolive dishwasher detergent. If you can send me any intact labels from these brands, I will eat every single one! — Franklin Rachow, Debary, Fla.

Dear Franklin — I tried, but I didn't have any more luck than you did. Plan on something else for dinner.

As winter nears, some plants need slight assistance

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

As the leaves fall off the trees, we know that winter can't be far away. Plants prepare themselves for winter by going into dormancy. However, some plants which are more easily damaged can use some extra help from us to survive.

Young evergreen trees and shrubs which are in the direct path of the prevailing wind can be easily damaged. When the soil is frozen, they cannot replace water evaporated from the needles which dry and turn brown.

A temporary windbreak or cover on the windward side can reduce the evaporation. The best material to use is burlap or other loosely woven fabric. Plastic should not be used for wrapping plants. It can trap heat inside on sunny winter days which may bring the plants out of dormancy, making them more prone to injury.

Young fruit and shade trees can have their trunk bark damaged by winter freezing and thawing. The area below the branches on the south and west sides is the most susceptible. The best and easiest way to protect this area is by painting with a white latex (not oil base) paint. The paint should be diluted about 3 to 1 with water.

The white paint reflects the sun, keeping the bark cooler during the day. Then the temperature drop is not as rapid or drastic after the sun goes down. Various temporary wrapping materials will shade the trunk and accomplish the same purpose. They should be removed again as soon as weather warms in the spring.

Roses, perennial flowers and some fruit trees and plants can be protected against winter kill by mulching around the roots. Any grafted plant should have the graft union protected by soil or other mulching material. The graft union is a bulge or curved area near the base of some woody plants where they were grafted to the root. I mound soil around this area to insulate from cold temperatures.

I pile leaves, straw or grass clippings several inches deep on roses and perennial flowers. I usually prune rose canes to about 8 to 10 inches and try to cover them completely. A chicken wire ring or inverted tomato support will keep the mulch from blowing away.

Straw is the best material with which to cover strawberries. It does not pack as much as grass clippings or leaves. Strawberries seem to need more air circulation than some other plants.

One of the best ways to prepare all plants for winter, including lawns, is to water them heavily before the soil freezes. Plant tissues which are full of water are not as easily damaged as dry ones. Freezing injury is primarily a drying injury.

Be sure to put on enough water to wet the entire root system. This may require several hours of sprinkling for deep rooted trees and shrubs.

Bulb-buyers beware: softness bad sign

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In buying bulbs, do not get any that are soft. I recently planted a soft daffodil bulb (though knowing better), and the best I can hope for is that it will simply rot quietly and not bother anything near it.

It is hard to discard a bulb of something new or rare or costly, and sometimes that bulb will sprout in spite of all, and in a year or two make a good sound bulb, but this is rare, and if you do propose to try to rescue such a bulb, then plant it in a sort of hospital bed, away from the others.

Once I had some soft bulbs (they developed miseries over the summer after I dug them in late June) that were hopeless, and, shame to say, I tossed them aside on top of the ground. They bloomed the next spring, the bulbs still above ground and the poor roots making contortions to get to the earth. Shocking.

But back to the store. Virtually all bulbs offered will be hard as rocks, which is what you want. The larger the bulb the better, within reason, and keeping in mind that a heavy bulb is better than a light one, never mind the size.

Nowadays bulbs are often sold from open boxes set on their sides to form a bin. When you select bulbs, put them instantly in one of those paper or plastic bags provided; otherwise you will forget which is which by the time you get them home.

I speak now only to the slobs among us: Damn it, do not take bulbs out of one bin and willy-nilly put them back in a different bin because you have changed your mind and forgot where the first ones came from.

There were years, I noticed, in which the stores were full of unsold bulbs at the end of the season, but this rarely happens nowadays. Dealers have learned not to order more from the wholesalers than they are likely to sell, and however sensible that is, it means they now often sell out. So don't wait till the last minute.

How sad it is that we can go right through our gardening lives without trying new things. How many years does the gardener see Allium moly listed in catalogues, or sitting in a bin at the store, without anything registering?

Many of the lesser bulbs flesser in the sense they are not as widely grown as daffodils and tulips and hyacinths), are inexpensive. Every year try a handful of new ones.

When I was a youth, I ordered a few bulbs of what was then called Tritelia uniflora violacea, though it didn't look like much in the picture and I didn't know anybody growing it.

Imagine my reward when it turned out the thing grew like a weed, flowering with the late or midseason daffodils, and shaping itself into the most exciting soft green hummocks of leaves solidly starred over with quite fragrant blue stars the size of a quarter for several weeks. (It is sometimes called Milla or Ipheion or Brodieaea, the last being correct, I think).

A group of bulbs not as neglected now as formerly are the wild tulips. The most wonderful ones to me are Tulipa clusiana, with small white and cherry blooms on stems about 14 inches high, and T. chrysantha, with yellow and soft red flowers smaller and shorter. There are at least a dozen kinds to be found in garden centers now, and more to be found in bulb catalogues.

I never see the bulbs at a store without a fierce itch to take them all home and plant them. Some of them have tufts of fur inside their glossy jackets, and the wild tulips in general are surprisingly heavy when you pick them up, though always small. They are not bulbs to be planted by the hundred for a great show; they are most delightful in patches of six, tucked in here and there in sunny places.

Crocuses are a high pleasure. They are relatively permanent; some of them seed themselves about in a modest way, which is not surprising since the bees have fits over them. About 12 years ago I planted crocuses in batches of 25 in little drifts, taking endless care and time over their selection.

Now they are surprisingly jumbled up. Some have seeded and come up where I never planted them; others have died out here and there. And I suspect squirrels, who are busy planting acorns everywhere, have distributed the bulbs gradually in their excavations.

Squirrels are blamed for a lot. People always tell me the squirrels eat all their bulbs. Well, they don't eat mine. One winter morning we had 19 squirrels sitting outside the kitchen door, an extraordinary sight — they looked like an army. We were late feeding them that morning.

I mention this to show we have God's own plenty of squirrels, but they do not seem to eat the bulbs or do any damage to speak of. I believe it was one individual that used to slice off the blooming stems of the Exbury and Ilam azaleas just before they flowered.

At the time this incensed me, but as it turned out I didn't like the azaleas very much anyway and no longer grow them. Squirrels never bother the evergreen azaleas with me. I confess I think they do eat anemones, because I have seen them in the act.

I planted some wild Anemone blanda, in several color forms of which the blue is prettiest. They seeded themselves around and I had rather a lot of them, but then they started disappearing. The ones I have left still grow vigorously, so it's not the case that conditions have gradually become unsuitable. I think it really is the squirrels.

On the other hand I like squirrels as much as anemones so things even out. We have more black ones than formerly (squirrels) but I never see white ones. I always thought it would be good to have black and white squirrels together, racing about the place, but in gardens where they have white ones (they are pale gray-cream, not really white) they tell me they never get black ones. Most squirrels are the plain gray (or red, as people often miscall them) squirrel, though the black variants seem to me to be increasing.

When lighting the fireplace for the first time in the fall, I always light a small piece of paper and hold it in the chimney first. It makes a bit of smoke.

If I do not hear great commotion, I light a whole sheet of newspaper and wait a minute, and if nothing happens then I lay and light the fire. If you go blundering about without these preliminaries you may face the horror of burned squirrels or birds coming down.

Survey: decorators more often consulted

By BARBARA MAYER
The Associated Press

A recent survey taken among members of the American Society of Interior Designers found that a wider range of clients is consulting decorators today than in the past.

"The dramatic increase in the number of working women has been a major force in changing the market for interior design," according to Gail Adams, president.

The survey also found that the scope of residential design projects varies widely, ranging from some that cost less than $5,000 to those with budgets of over $200,000. The cost of the average living room redesign was $15,664; the bathroom, $5,008; and the kitchen $12,133.

The new dependence on design expertise has sent many who might not have chosen to work with an interior decorator in the past scurrying to find someone who will stay within the budget and whose personality will blend well with their needs.

As more people seek designers, new methods of pairing the two are likely to arise. One which was organized recently in the New York area is the Designer Referral Service set up by Judy Block, formerly employed by a designer, and Sharon Dietz, a former public-school art teacher.

The two women met as neighbors in the Westchester County suburb of Chappaqua. They currently represent about 45 designers and craftsmen.

They interview each potential client, reviewing the scope of the desired job, budget limitations and other requirements, and advising whether the job is practically possible to accomplish.

Then they pair the client with the most appropriate designer. There is no charge for the service to the client; the women receive a commission on jobs from the designers.

Besides helping clients conceptualize what they want done, the two say the non-threatening atmosphere they provide is another advantage. Many clients feel uncomfortable discussing some of these issues with a designer.

Mrs. Block says the idea for the new business developed over the years. As a former assistant to a designer and a member of a family with a carpet business, she was frequently asked to recommend a designer or offer an opinion on a wallpaper, fabric or carpet sample.

"There's a professional to consult for almost everything nowadays, but there wasn't for decorators; we decided we could fill this unmet need," she said.

Among some two dozen clients since June have been a couple with a large budget and no time to interview designers, who wanted a complete redesign of their home and a divorced mother with $5,000 to spend on "a pink bedroom."

Mrs. Block noted that one method she used to find decorators to represent was to visit show houses where many designers' work is on view.

Brazilian 'Feijoada' inspires a spicy bean-rice alternative

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

Today's inventive cooks in the United States sometimes draw inspiration for new dishes from those of other countries.

For example, when I recently came across a new recipe for rice and beans I realized it had a resemblance to the Brazilian national dish called Feijoada. In its most complex form, Feijoada calls for 16 to 20 ingredients — all kinds of meat, black beans, fresh vegetables, onion, garlic and other seasonings. Feijoada is always served with rice and often has a garnish of sliced oranges.

In comparison the following recipe is simple. As a main dish all it needs is a salad to accompany it.

BRAZILIAN-STYLE BEANS AND RICE

2 cups water
1 cup converted-type rice
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
½ pound sweet Italian sausage, cut into ½-inch pieces
¼ pound cooked ham, cut into ½-inch cubes
1 large clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons dark rum
1 medium tomato, seeded and diced
One 15-ounce can black beans
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley or fresh cilantro
Grated orange rind, if desired

In a large skillet, bring water to a boil. Stir in rice, onion, sausage, ham, garlic, red pepper flakes and pepper. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. (Just before simmering time for rice mixture is up, drain beans, rinse in very hot tap water and drain again.) Remove rice mixture from heat; Stir in rum. Spoon tomato and beans on top. Let stand covered until all liquid is absorbed about 5 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and orange rind. Makes 6 servings.

Creole fare is flavored by variety of spices

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

New Orleans is famed as the home of fine food, with Creole cookery holding the No. 1 spot. This rich spicy fare is actually a blend of French, Spanish and Anglo-Saxon cuisines.

Over the years, this unique cuisine was enriched by African cooks and was given added zest by West Indian spices.

In the old days, the Creoles were generally rich planters who led a life of luxury. So it is natural that their kitchens leaned toward the Grande Cusine of Europe. It is especially known for its delicate blends and variety of sauces.

The earliest recipes came from Europe, because the French and Spanish aristocrats had been brought up in the Old World, and most of them brought along their chefs when they came to Louisiana.

Jambalaya is an original Louisiana mixture of rice, shrimp, oysters, tomatoes, onion, garlic and peppers and thyme, as well as chicken and sausage.

When the French came to Louisiana they retained their fondness for bouillabaisse, the famed fish stew of southern Europe, but there were no Mediterranean fish, eels or lobster that had made the dish famous.

The Spanish settlers added red peppers to this delectable mixture, and the dish which came to the be known as jambalaya was born.

Modifications of these dishes are popular up North today, such as this recipe for Creole Shrimp served in restaurants of New York City's Rockefeller Center:

1 small onion, chopped
½ green pepper, chopped
½ stalk celery, chopped
1 clove garlic, chopped fine
2 cans (14 ounces each) Italian peeled tomatoes, drained and chopped
½ teaspoon salt
Pinch cayenne
2 bay leaves
1 pound shrimp, peeled and deveined

Fry bacon in a skillet, remove and drain on paper towels. In the bacon fat, cook the onion, pepper, celery and garlic for 3 to 4 minutes, until slightly softened. Add tomatoes, salt, cayenne and bay leaves. Cook over low heat for 5 minutes. Add the shrimp, cook until they are cooked through. Remove bay leaves. This will yield 3 servings as an entree or 6 servings as an appetizer.

Avocado, chicken make tasty dinner

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

LINDA ECKHARDT'S CHICKEN-AVOCADO

4 boneless chicken breast fillets (about 1½ pounds)
Salt and pepper to taste
Melted butter
1 large very ripe avocado
¼ cup dry sherry
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts

Preheat broiler and broiler pan at least 5 minutes. Salt and pepper fillets and brush lightly with melted butter. When pan is hot enough to sizzle if you flick water onto it, place fillets, serve side up, on pan. Broil about 5 inches from heat for about 5 minutes. Turn when light golden brown. Broil on other side about 3 minutes. While chicken is cooking, whip peeled avocado until perfectly pureed; then fold in sherry and walnuts. Place a dollop of this atop each fillet and continue to broil until a lovely golden brown (about 5 minutes). Serves 4.
